Community organizer Fred Ross brings skills to Carmel to spearhead national nuclear freeze

"A democracy lacking in popular participation dies of paralysis."

Saul Alinsky

"I've always said that the only way to talk to the Establishment is not through their ears but through their rears."

Saul Alinsky

By JOE LIVERNOIS

THE MAN WHO joined forces with radical community organizer Saul Alinsky and discovered farmworker labor leader Cesar Chavez is now in Carmel to train potential civil rights activists to organize Americans toward a nuclear freeze.

Fred Ross, who earned status as either a legend or a notorious rabble-rouser depending on whether one owned the lettuce field or worked in it, will spend four weeks in Carmel to teach volunteers from throughout the United States to become better organizers.

An organizer with his credentials might be able to earn a hefty sum for his services, but Ross is donating his time to the Freeze Voter '84 movement. It's something I really believe in," he said.

From a home on Carmel Beach, Ross will conduct 12-hour sessions, six days a week, on the nuts and bolts of political activism and organization on the grassroots level.

His "house meeting method" will be the most common organizing tool in the Freeze Voter '84 movement and it has been most successful for him as an activist, he said.

"That's where I found Dolores Huerta," he said, in reference to one of Cesar Chavez' most able organizers. "It was in Stockton in 1955. I found Cesar at a house meeting in 1952."

But beyond the discovery of strident leaders, Ross said house meetings are important because "you can find the issues better" in an intimate group.

At a house meeting, with between five and 15 persons, participants are more likely to speak up than they would at a larger gathering, he said. "And when you're talking to one person at a time, you often don't get a straight story. You ask a person one-on-one if they've been prejudiced against and he might tell you 'no' only because it is such an emotional thing for him. But if he says 'no' at a house meeting, chances are there will be someone there who can challenge him until he's willing to admit it."

Ross does not consider himself a disciple of the late Alinsky — who lived in Carmel Highlands during his later years — but he does admit the controversial activist "taught me a lot."

BACK IN THE 1940s, Ross lived in Southern California barrios and worked for the American Council of Race Relations.

At the time, Alinsky played pinochle with the director of the American Council of Race Relations, Louis Worth, in Chicago.

During one card-playing session, Worth complained aloud that "that jerk in California we sent out to study the Mexican-Americans is trying to organize them. Saul's ears popped up. Six weeks later, he came out to California and hired me."

Ross stayed in Los Angeles, "the hub of Mexican culture in the United States," for five years. In that time, he helped organize Edward Roybal's successful campaign for Los Angeles City Council. Roybal became the first Mexican-American to serve on the L.A. city council after more than 15,000 citizens were registered to vote. He eventually became a congressman.

'A tall, quiet man with a seamed, sad face, Ross would be perfectly cast for the role of Jesus Christ in a Passion Play.'

Ross then moved to San Jose, which had the second largest assemblage of Mexican-Americans in this country, where he established the Community Services Organization, a group founded by Roybal.

While in San Jose, Ross became acquainted with Cesar Chavez, who was then picking apricots and who eventually "became an outstanding leader of the CSO."

"I talked to Saul about hiring him," Ross said. "And he did."

"It was very apparent he was a very sharp individual," he said. "And he had a tremendous loyalty to his people. And he was reticent; he wasn't tooting his own horn a lot."

Ross is still proud of his find. "You can spend your life looking for a man or woman of gold and you're lucky to get brass. With Cesar, he certainly filled the bill."

Eventually, Chavez became national director of organizing of the CSO, but he resigned when he was unable to convince other CSO officials that "the biggest problem in the Mexican-American community was with the farmworkers," Ross said.

For many Chicanos who moved to the city, Ross said, "it's hard to return to the soil once you've left." Chavez was a farmworker who never became urbanized, he said.

Wall's allegations false

Dear Editor:

As the co-author of Junipero Serra, An Illustrated Biography of the Franciscan Founder of California's Missions, scheduled for publication in July by the Harper and Row Publishing Company, I can state unabashedly and unequivocally that virtually all of Ms. Rosalind Sharpe Wall's allegations regarding Serra's treatment and conversion of the Indians are incorrect.

And, in declaring this without hesitation, reservation, or qualification, I gently invite her to join with me in an amicable, old-fashioned town-meeting type debate before an open and inquiring forum.

Sponsored and properly conducted by the Pine Cone, or Monterey Peninsula College, or the Carmel Public Library, a presentation of the archival evidence on both sides can be reviewed and questioned so that interested and participating listeners can determine for themselves whether the remains of a saint or a sinner are sealed in the sanctuary of their beloved Carmel Mission.

Since space in this column does not allow for a point-by-point refutation of Ms. Wall's excessively harsh indictments, allow me to say that California history abounds with amateur, sometimes radical and anti-Catholic, historians who did not have access to the rich documentation found in Mexico City, Madrid, and Palma, Majorca.

Now, with the bicentennial of the padre presidente's death upon us, and the possible declaration of Serra as "venerable" by Pope John Paul, the first of the final three steps toward canonization, a variety of unsubstantiated stories will surely emerge supporting the views of such historians.

Unfortunately, the epochal nature of Fray Junipero Serra's work still remains to be generally recognized. If the well-meaning Ms. Wall will unite forces with me in a spirited historical inquiry, I am confident the good people of the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas Valley will be the beneficiaries.

Let's debate Serra

Dear Editor:

Two letters by Rosalind Sharpe Wall on the subject of Fr. Serra (March 1 and April 5 issues of the Pine Cone) present a picture of Serra very much at odds with mine.

In the April 5 letter, Ms. Wall states: "He was an exceedingly cruel man altogether lacking in the milk of human kindness." In the same letter, she states flatly: "Father Serra was hated by the Indians."

I have talked on the phone with Ms. Wall. I question neither her sincerity nor her intelligence. I do question her conclusions. In our conversations I asked if she would like to debate the topic of Serra and his treatment of the mission Indians in public. She replied she is not in good enough health for such a project.

So let me extend an invitation to anybody who shares views on Serra similar to those expressed in Ms. Wall's letters. I am willing to debate, in public, in a neutral place, anybody who wishes to take the opposite stand on a resolution which might be expressed in this or similar fashion:

"Resolved: Junipero Serra, because of his love and compassionate treatment of the Native Californians he served, deserves respect and honor for his contributions to early California history."

I would suggest such a debate follow the usual debate format, that it be open to the public, that it be presented in some large meeting place on the Monterey Peninsula, that it be sponsored by one of the local historical societies, and that any proceeds be given to charity.

Serra had his faults. All strong people do. He was tenacious and single-minded. It was not his nature to back away from opposition, especially when it involved the good of the missions. But I tend to agree with James Culleton, who in his Indians and Pioneers of Old Monterey (pub. 1950) had this to say about Junipero Serra: "These human imperfections do not make Father Serra any less a saint but only more a man."

Caption was offensive

Dear Editor:

The caption under the photograph on page A-3, April 26, 1984 issue of your publication stating "a Carmelite's dream: a tourist being swept away while his wife takes a photo," is the sickest excuse for humor I've seen in print. I'm sure the friends and relatives of those who have drowned after being "swept away" will also fail to see the humor. Neither will those who have risked their lives recovering the bodies.

Contrary to your caption, Carmelites do not necessarily want the tourists and business that caters to them washed away. Carmel operates on an annual budget of $9 million per year, most of which comes from the tourist industry.

If that money were to disappear, where will the replacement funds come from. Perhaps those on the City Council who wish to turn the clock back at every opportunity will offer suggestions. We enjoy top notch police and fire protection, superior city services and, fortunately, enough money to support it all.

None of the benefits we enjoy would be possible without the business community to support it.

Needless to say, I did not find the caption amusing. Perhaps the Carmelites you refer to, that wish to wash tourists away, are those on the City Council; I find them even less amusing.

Keeping council in check

Dear Editor:

Hooray for your editorials and for Jane V. Wilson's letters about the Carmel City Council.

Such watchdogging will undoubtedly help keep them in check until the next election.

At that time — hopefully — some incumbents will be unseated. Or, with the arrogance we have been experiencing, maybe I should say "de-throned."

Farr remembers Ansel

Dear Editor:

It was with great sadness that I learned of the passing of Ansel Adams, one of the great men of the 20th Century.

As recently as Easter Sunday, I was at Ansel's home, although he was not there, and I was again, as always, moved by the simple elegance and majesty of his craft.

In honor of this truly great American, I am today asking my colleagues to adjourn session in his memory.

It was less than one year ago, on May 23, 1983, that Ansel was the honored guest of the Assembly, and was recognized on the floor of the House for his tremendous and sustaining contributions to "the arts, the earth, and to the nation."

We can all be thankful that during our lifetime Ansel Adams walked this earth and left a heritage to each of us, to our children, and to the earth.

During his 82 years, Ansel Adams developed his craft and vision of the world through photography. He has left with us an enduring view and study of the parklands, open space, wilderness of California and the nation. He will be sorely missed and forever remembered.

Don't vote for Lee

Dear Editor:

Ed Lee, candidate for supervisor, was quoted recently as saying that a "radical coalition" had "taken over" the city council in Monterey and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Board. To label either of these duly elected bodies "radical" is to misconstrue reality. It would be hard to find two more ho-hum bastions of the status quo.

Growth has not ground to a halt in Monterey and the council has approved more growth. The water board continues its orderly and law abiding task of presenting the voters with a proposal for a dam. It will make sure the voters have all the facts in order to make an informed decision.

Ed Lee, on the other hand, is busy invoking the words of a corrupt politician who became famous trying to check the free flow of information to the American people. The news account mentioned Lee's use of Spiro T. Agnew's phrase "nattering nabobs of negativism" to describe the conservative city council and water board.

I was so shocked when I heard Lee use this smear that I asked him if he was aware of its source. Beaming, he alluded to Agnew.

Using a phrase coined by the man who corrupted the second highest office in our country should not instill confidence. When you go to the polls in June, remember Spiro T. and don't vote for Ed Lee!

Carmel's 'computer age'

Dear Editor:

I see by the papers that Carmel is thinking of joining the computer age. Is such modern thinking compatible with the highly touted village character?

Maybe, eventually, Carmel might even have house numbers, mail delivery and street lights in the residential areas as well as some more sidewalks. The present city council is to be commended for its modern thinking.

A perfect image?

Too good not to pass on: While discussing the passing on of Ansel Adams, and the earthquake which followed two days later, a friend made the comment that she felt the tremor was caused by the vibration of Ansel's shutter taking a picture of The Whole Thing!

Clustered mailboxes?

Dear Editor:

How can we go about asking Carmel residents whether we'd like clustered mailboxes every other block as those living at 93923 addresses do and as Carmel Rancho Boulevard business and professionals do?

Have we no choice but to cling to the quaint custom of visiting the Carmel Post Office to pick up our mail even though the weather is rainy, we are ill, have a broken leg, are too frail or otherwise incapacitated to climb Carmel hills?

Most of us dislike imposing on friends for any length of time, and many of us cannot afford the expensive mail delivery system now addressing this problem.

Let's face it: many of us are 20-some odd years older than when the last vote was taken, according to the Carmel Pine Cone Remember When column — that is, if we are still alive.

Now that Social Security and dividend checks can go straight to one's bank, we no longer have safety reasons. It is a pleasure to see an occasional friend we don't see elsewhere and to chuck junk mail in the P.O. wastebaskets. Those who wish to have boxes would certainly not be denied that privilege.

Don't you get tired of explaining where you live to new friends and acquaintances, taxi drivers, repair and delivery people? It was different 50 years ago when there were fewer and hardier residents who though nothing of hiking to Holman's and back via Pebble Beach.

It certainly would alleviate the frustrating parking problem across from the post office which is so time and fuel consuming and we might really get to know our immediate neighbors if we had every-other-block boxes.

What's wrong with tourists

Dear Editor:

In your March 29, 1984 article on the Carmel Business Association, you quoted Ellie Lester who states that she "really can't understand" why the residents of Carmel dislike tourists. I have resided in Carmel since I was six years old, or 20 years, and would like to explain to her why we do not like the outside interests that exploit our quiet little town.

The Monterey Peninsula has always been cherished for its natural beauty and the residents who respect and protect the flora and fauna indigenous to it. We are unique in that we do not rampantly exploit Mother Nature to satisfy our own greedy human nature. Carmel started out as an artist's colony and a retreat from the harassment of city life — a place to escape superficial materialism.

Now, with downtown Carmel being developed as one big shopping mall, the town has been sacrificed to the tourists who drop their dollars here. Carmel has become an impossible place to start a career and family, which is what I am trying to do, because it no longer caters to its residents.

It only caters to the wealthy consumer and the businesses and the "services" they supposedly provide. The residents of Carmel do not thrive on the hotels, restaurants, or gift shops. We need only those businesses that provide services direct to the residents — the young, the old, families and retirees.

Without the residents, the businesses are nothing. If the residents did not provide as quaint a setting as we do by taking pride in our homes and neighborhoods, Carmel would not be a place worth visiting and, hence, would not attract the almighty tourist dollar. Unlike the merchants who "try hard to be local," we are local! We will be here long after the tourists are gone!

Additionally, Carmel does take pride in itself and it is for this reason that we resent the tourists, their litter, their crime, their disrespect for the residents, and their ever-abounding traffic. I think we have reached a point of diminishing returns.

There are just too many outsiders who don't have a vested interest in this town and too few residents who have an active voice in determining the fate of this town that was once our retreat from busy or dangerous streets, shopping centers, and parking lots.

Sculpture is art

Dear Editor:

It is with amusement and a little chagrin that I read Mr. Etienne's plan "to argue that Bennett Sculpture does not fall in the category of 'art gallery' because it sells sculpture rather than paintings or prints."

I wonder in what category Mr. Etienne puts sculpture, if not art.

Ramifications of Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant affect all

By ROBERT MISKIMON

ONE IS STRUCK both with the singular beauty of the coastline south of Big Sur and with the relatively pristine condition of the earth while driving on Highway 1.

These observations are made by practically everyone who travels the coast highway, as will thousands of visitors this summer attracted both by the Olympic Games in Los Angeles and the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco.

Thousands of those visitors are expected to make their way to Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula, and to Big Sur, to bring many, many dollars into the local economy. So it is with both apprehension and anticipation that local residents and merchants await the summer months.

Only 150 miles south of here — in a spot not likely to draw the attention of many tourists — Pacific Gas and Electric Co. hopes to have in full operation its Diablo Canyon nuclear reactor by this summer. Tests were initiated this week, and were delayed by a new twist of fate — technical failure in a valve.

Having spent nearly $5 billion and having waited 17 years to get the reactor fired up, PG&E officials and stockholders are anxious to have the plant in operation. For the time being, the Abalone Alliance and other opponents seems to have exhausted their legal remedies and testing proceeds.

During a week-long vacation in Avila Beach, not more than a stone's throw from the entrance to Diablo Canyon where the protests have been staged, I got a chance to see the lay of the land and visit a PG&E "information center" on the Diablo Canyon reactor — but was unable to tour the plant.

PG&E has spared no expense to put forth its message about the benefits and safe use of atomic energy in this roadside attraction near the turnoff to Diablo Canyon/Avila Beach. There are working diagrams, scale model reactors, charts, talking slide shows, a regular movie theater, video presentations, and a plethora of literature on peaceful uses of the atom.

All of this is quite impressive and does, in fact, give the impression that every conceivable effort has been expended to make Diablo Canyon earthquake and accident safe. The PG&E "information center" (read "propoganda center") is, if nothing else, a masterpiece of slick public relations.

DURING my visit to Avila Beach, repeated trips at various times of the day and night revealed few protestors and none of the kind of street theater seen on television evening news. There was an old yellow school bus, plastered with anti-nuke signs, reminiscent of the hippie era, parked directly opposite the entrance to the seven-mile road to Diablo Canyon for several days.

And one evening, a solitary woman paced back and forth in front of the entrance, slowly beating an Indian tom-tom. This, clearly, was not a corporate media blitz designed to win the public affection, as was the case with the PG&E effort a few miles away.

Residents of Avila Beach and the surrounding area nonchalantly pursue their daily lives, either indifferent to the furor over Diablo Canyon or unable to react any more — for or against. And yet...the reality remains that an awesome generator of electrical power from nuclear energy is poised close to an earthquake fault line.

What does this have to do with Carmel/Carmel Valley/Pebble Beach?

We are all investors in and potential consumers of electricity from Diablo Canyon, and our children and grand children are heirs to the promise and danger of nuclear energy. The answer to whether the Diablo Canyon plant is safe may come from Mother Nature, if and when the reactor must sustain the effects of a major quake, and from man, if and when a human error occurs which threatens the lives and safety of citizens.

Until then, all of us are left with two choices: the slick, roadside "information center" or the the solitary tom-tom beater.

TRAFFIC circulation near Harrison Memorial Library will not be adversely affected if the city decides to close a portion of Lincoln Street to make room for an annex, according to a report issued recently. The city council is to discuss the annex, the Sunset Center parking garage plan and city hall location when it meets at 9 a.m. Saturday, May 5 at city hall. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

According to consultant

Library annex wouldn't affect traffic pattern

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TRAFFIC CIRCULATION would not be adversely affected if the city closes Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues to make way for an annex to Harrison Memorial Library.

That is the conclusion reached by consulting traffic engineer Joe Holland in his report to the city council released April 26.

The council will discuss the various options for a library annex during a rare Saturday session at 9 a.m. May 5 in Carmel City Hall.

In addition to the annex, the council will review choices for the possible relocation of city hall plus progress on the proposed parking garage at Sunset Center.

In a separate matter, the council is expected to appoint a new member of the forestry commission to replace Bob Evans, who resigned.

The session Saturday is designed to reduce the number of decisions for each of the major projects now pondered by the city council, City Administrator Doug Schmitz told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

The city could build an annex in conjunction with the proposed parking garage at Sunset Center. Or the council may want to rever to its original plan to construct the annex on three-city owned lots at the northwest.

Schmitz wants to review the various alternatives for the projects and have the council narrow the choices down to two or three.

The proposed annex to Harrison Memorial Library, which will cost in the neighborhood of $1 million, is expected to get most of the council's attention, Schmitz said.

Voters in November overwhelmingly rejected a council scheme to build a brand new library, parking garage and park on the north field of Sunset Center. As part of that plan the council wanted to relocate city hall to the existing Harrison Memorial Library.

The scuttled Sunset Center plan has been replaced by a proposal to construct the annex directly on Lincoln Street just to the west of the current library building.

In conjunction with the Lincoln Street proposal the council hired traffic consultant Joe Holland of Sacramento to study circulation in that area. The city has three possibilities for Lincoln Street: close it completely or partially, or eliminate parking and narrow the street to make room for the annex, Holland reported.

"None of the three schemes will result in drastically changed peak hour traffic volumes or conditions at vicinity intersections for either the typical or seasonal weekend traffic volume levels," Holland wrote in his report.

HOLLAND'S REPORT lists several conclusions for the council to consider, including:

- "The full closure scheme would result in the largest gain in usable area for the library site. The partial closure scheme would result in somewhat less area gain, and the narrowing scheme would result in the least area gain.
- "Other than the measures necessary to result in a safe and effective street closure (such as curbs, barriers and signs), it does not appear that the additional traffic engineering measures will be needed as a result of the traffic diversion caused by the closure schemes.
- "The scheme which would retain two-way traffic, while removing parking and narrowing the street, would not result in changes to the existing traffic patterns and conditions, but would result in the loss of the parking spaces and slight misalignment of the northbound Lincoln traffic lane at the intersections on either end of the subject street section."
- "All of the schemes will result in the loss of the existing nine short-time curb parking spaces on the subject street section."

Holland's circulation analysis predicts that most of the cars would divert on Monte Verde or Dolores streets if the city completely closes Lincoln Street.

If the city wants to close only one lane of Lincoln Street it would be safer to allow southbound traffic and divert northbound cars to another street, Holland reported.

The city also could eliminate the parking spaces and narrow the road to provide an additional 16 feet of space on Lincoln Street for an annex.

Aside from Lincoln Street, there are a number of alternative locations for the annex, which library officials say is sorely needed because of the lack of space in the existing building.

The city could build an annex in conjunction with the proposed parking garage at Sunset Center. Or the council may want to revert to its original plan to construct the annex on three city-owned lots at the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

The corner proposal was scrapped by the council in favor of the now-defunct plan for an entirely new library building at Sunset Center.

At the same time, Carmel Fire Chief Robert Updike has suggested the city move the station from its present Sixth Avenue location to a new building on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

UPDIKE PROPOSES to relocate the fire station because the existing building is too small and there are traffic circulation problems between Mission and San Carlos streets.

If the city does build a new fire station, the annex could be moved to the old firehouse.

Like the annex, the alternatives for Carmel City Hall are varied and many.

Library workers want city status

WORKERS AT HARRISON Memorial Library in Carmel would like to become bona fide, 100 percent Carmel city employees.

Actually, the nine full-time employees already get practically the same wage and benefit package offered city employees and their checks also are signed by City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

"We do most of the business type processing regarding library employees and their salary and benefits anyway," Schmitz said.

But when the library staff negotiates new contracts, they must gain approval of both the city and the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees.

Instead, the Library Employees Association wants to be included with other city employees so they can avoid the individual negotiations that, according to Stephanie Pearce, puts the workers in a "vulnerable position." The library staff does not want to continue negotiations with the library board.

Mrs. Pearce is the financial assistant at the Harrison Library and has been a library employee for eight years. She told the Pine Cone/Outlook she is also the "staff representative who initiated all this."

Trustees met with Schmitz in a closed door session during the regular board of trustees meeting April 24 in Carmel city hall in an attempt to resolve the matter.

They decided not to take a position on the matter until board president Bernard Anderson has a chance to vote. Anderson, a former Carmel mayor, was missing from the meeting last week because of an illness in the family.

"It's been a tradition over the past five years to negotiate the same things with both the city and the library board," Mrs. Pearce said. "It's a more complicated process."

Not coincidentally, the library board last week did not approve its personnel budget for fiscal year 1984-85, though it did adopt its operating budget.

Library Director Peg Richter said the operating budget increased six percent over the 1984 budget to $122,000. "But almost all of that went to book budget," she said. "We have not increased our book budget in two years."

Mrs. Pearce said the personnel budget last year was approximately $315,000 — or about 70 percent of the cost of keeping the library open and staffed with the equivalent of 13 full-time positions.

She told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week that she and fellow library employees hope they can be included with city employees before the city budget is adopted.

Schmitz said the library board has often considered giving up its jurisdiction over its staff, especially around budget time each year "but it did not know how the employees felt about it. Now they have an indication."

Harrison Memorial Library to purchase computer equipment

THE HARRISON MEMORIAL Library will soon compute.

The library board of trustees agreed last week to spend more than $200,000 from its budget reserves to purchase computer hardware and software and to convert library records into computer form.

The board agreed to buy the computer and software from CLSI of Massachusetts, one of the pioneer library computer system firms and the company that provided automated systems to city libraries in Monterey and Watsonville, according to Peg Richter, Harrison Library director.

If all goes as scheduled, the automated system will be "up and running in January," Ms. Richter told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

"It will allow us to provide quicker, more efficient services," she said. "There are better things we could be doing than trying to relieve the paper chase."

Relieving the paper chase is about all the library staff has been doing in recent years, Ms. Richter said, since library staffing was cut 15 percent while circulation and services have increased almost twofold.

The new system will provide electronic access to card catalogs and will instantly tell circulation workers whether or not the book is in the library.

It will also electronically print overdue notices; they are now typed one by one. "We are never caught up with our overdue notices," Ms. Richter said.

The system will also allow the library staff to determine "what books people are borrowing," she said. By doing so, the library can get rid of the books that are not so popular or purchase more books with a backlog of waiting patrons.

But most importantly, the automated system will free library workers from the sometimes frenetic pace of the existing system. "It will give our staff more time to interact with patrons," Ms. Richter said.

WHILE THE COMPUTER may save a considerable amount of time for the staff now, the next several months will be hectic as workers endeavor to prepare the library for its newfangled automated system.

"It will take us a long time to convert records," said Ms. Richter.

All cards in the card catalogs will be converted into the electronic system and "bar labels" will be placed on all the books, she said. Bar labels are those odd-looking markings shoppers might find on food packages if they shop in a store with an automated checker system.

The library will also need to reregister all its card-carrying patrons, Ms. Richter said. That alone will be a monumental effort, "but it will allow us to update our patron files," she said. "That hasn't been done in a long time. It will give us the opportunity to purge names on our file who are no longer patrons."

The automated system will be paid for with funds from the budget reserve maintained by the library.

Initially, the library board had considered using money from its endowment fund to pay for the computer. But it finally agreed to use money from its budget reserve because the reserve was set aside for capital projects to improve library services, Ms. Richter said.

The endowment fund, which totals almost $1 million and is drawing interest through a series of short- and long-term investments, has been earmarked for library expansion projects.

The computer and its software will cost about $103,000 and the cost to convert library records, to add bar labels to books and new electrical circuitry in the library and to reregister patrons is estimated to be about $100,000.

The board of trustees approval of the automated system is contingent on formal permission by the Carmel Cultural and Community Commission to place the master computer in the Sunset Center room occupied by the library processing department, Ms. Richter said.

CHILDREN'S librarian Linda Geroy may have to take her bird act on the road if an annex is constructed for Harrison Memorial Library. The city council will discuss annex options during a special 9 a.m. meeting Saturday, May 5. The children's department probably will be relocated to the annex. Above, Ms. Geroy demonstrated how birds fly during a recent story hour. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)

The future location of city hall has been in doubt ever since the council received the approximately $300,000 estimate for remodeling.

Council members have indicated they believe one proposed site, the old Episcopal Church site on Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, is just too small.

The city has indicated a willingness to buy the Presbyterian church property, southeast corner of Junipero and Ocean Avenues, if the price is right.

The church congregation recently voted on a plan to build a new sanctuary on Carmel Hill near Highway 68. However, the vote still has not been tabulated.

The council has told church officials it wants to begin negotiations immediately if the church property is put on the market for sale.

The council could build a new city hall in conjunction with the Sunset Center parking garage plan. Or city hall could be relocated to the top of the public works building, east side of Junipero Avenue between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

The building originally was constructed so that a second story could be added for the muncipal offices. A new location would then have to be found for the public works department. However, that scheme has never been carried out.

The fire station and Flanders Mansion inside Mission Trail Park are two other potential sites for city hall.

If the council does relocate the municipal offices it will have to develop a proposal for either selling or finding another use for city hall.

Or the council simply may choose to remodel city hall as originally planned a couple of years ago.

Another project on the May 5 agenda is the proposed underground parking garage at Sunset Center.

The options before the city include: the number of levels, whether to charge for parking, how to finance the project and what to put on top of the garage.

Suggestions for the top level include a city hall, annex, fire station, museum, senior housing, workshops for artists or a park.

Depending on the time, the council may delve into the issue of senior citizen housing, Schmitz said.

The council previously planned to build a senior citizen housing complex on two city-owned lots on the west side of Dolores Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

However, those plans have been temporarily shelved until the council makes decisions on the future of city hall, the library and parking garage.

Community organizer Ross brings campaign to Carmel

ABOUT 18 MONTHS after Chavez quit the CSO to form the United Farm Workers of America, Ross followed.

He worked for Chavez for almost two decades through the formative years of the UFW. "I helped," he said simply.

But he did much more than that. According to at least three books written about Chavez and his struggle to unionize the farmworkers of California, Ross was depicted as the man who set Chavez' itinerary.

"A tall, quiet man with a seamed, sad face, Ross would be perfectly cast for the role of Jesus Christ in a Passion Play," wrote John Gregory Dunne in his Chavez biography called Delano.

Indeed, Ross was more than just a bit player in the history of the United Farm Workers.

If there is one thing he believes he accomplished in molding Chavez, he said: "I helped to create the tremendous patience against the tremendous odds he faced that would turn anyone else stark raving mad."

Scholars of UFW activity continue to argue how closely Chavez was tied to Alinsky, who maintained a rather Machiavellian view of civil rights activism.

That connection was Ross, though Ross exerted a more mellow, if not a more successful, influence with his patient organizational skills than did the firebrand Alinsky, who sneered at the self-righteousness of liberals as much as he railed against hard-hearted conservatives.

Ross, who lives in Marin and who vows to continue to organize Americans in causes he believes to be right for as long as he can "hold out," said he hopes his one-month visit to Carmel will be the catalyst for a nationwide weapons freeze movement.

Jacquelyn Smith, a Carmel woman who accompanied Ross, said Ross will spend three days explaining organizational skills to participants and will then help coordinate house meetings throughout the Central Coast.

In fact, Ross will attend most of the house meetings during the month and will monitor everything from the invitational phone calls to the meetings themselves.

Each house meeting is expected to result in several other meetings — much like a chain letter works — and the snowball effect will thereby enlighten more and more citizens to both the implications of a continued nuclear arms build-up and the potential solutions.

MS. SMITH SAID the immediate goal of Freeze Voter '84 is to "elect 10 more senators who support the freeze" this year. "We already have a majority in Congress," she said.

Participants in the Ross training session will be sent to states and Congressional districts throughout the United States which will be targeted by the freeze movement where a pro-freeze candidate has a good chance of winning.

"Seventy percent of the people in America support the freeze," Mrs. Smith said. "But if you asked them why, you'll find they need more understanding of the issue."

The house meetings, if successful, will offer citizens more information on the issue and will promote continued activism against increased federal expenditures for weaponry.

Ross said the United States government will spend about $1.6 trillion ($1,600,000,000,000) in the coming years for weapons.

From plowshares to bombs, Ross continues to use his skills to "help."

"I believe in volunteerism," he said.

Alan Williams resigns post as Citizens Committee head

CARMEL CITIZENS Committee President Alan Williams has resigned from that position to avoid potentially "awkward political situations," he told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week.

Williams, a building designer, has a controversial plan before the city that offers construction of a senior citizen housing complex in return for permission to develop two, 20-unit motels on property he owns on both sides of Junipero Avenue between Fourth and Third avenues.

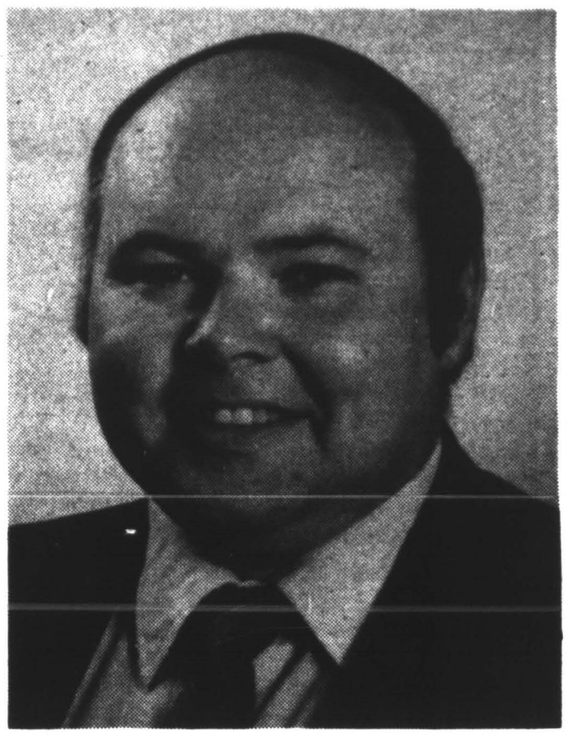
Williams hopes to present his proposal to the planning commission in June. He also will ask the city council to order a special election to determine whether voters will approve his concept. Williams has offered to finance the special election.

It was because of the potential election and controversial nature of the proposal that Williams decided to step down as president of the Carmel Citizens Committee.

"Basically I find myself in a conflict," Williams said last week. "I felt I would bring controversy to the committee."

The citizens committee frequently holds town meetings on controversial topics, such as a recent session on the voter-rejected plan to move Harrison Memorial Library to a new park/library/parking garage complex at Sunset Center.

"I would compromise their objectivity to look at the project," Williams said.



ALAN WILLIAMS has stepped down as president of the Carmel Citizens Committee.

Williams added that his decision to step down was in no way connected to a minor fury that stirred after the citizens committee chose not to sponsor a council candidates' night.

Williams has been succeeded by Robert Priestley.

As deterrent to crime

Salinas Soroptimists to offer child fingerprinting sessions

THE SALINAS Soroptimist Club will offer parent clubs in Carmel schools free training sessions on how to fingerprint children.

Fingerprinting children is recognized as a potential deterrent to abduction and also makes it easier to trace a kidnapped child, according to Janell Sheldon, chairwoman of the Soroptomist project.

"We know that you will not find a child just because of fingerprinting, but if there is a sighting it makes it easier for police to take fingerprints from the area and determine if that was the child," Ms. Sheldon told the Pine Cone/Outlook April 26.

"Hopefully it will be a deterrent. Maybe if some of these sick people think they can be traced or followed they will think twice about it," she continued.

The children's fingerprint records are given to the parents. The Monterey County Sheriff's Office, which assists in the project, and the Soroptimist Club do not keep any records of the fingerprints or names of those taking advantage of the project, Ms. Sheldon explained.

Parents also are provided with a form to keep records of their child's vital statistics, identifying marks, dental work and a current photograph.

The Soroptimists, in conjunction with the sheriff's office, fingerprinted more than 100 Tularcitos School youngsters April 30. The club also has fingerprinted thousands of children in the North Monterey County area.

But the club now will limit its project to parent club training because many Soroptimists are businesswomen with time constraints, Ms. Sheldon said.

Parent clubs interested in receiving a training session on how to organize a school-wide fingerprinting project can call Ms. Sheldon at 424-0708.

Captain Cooper carnival

THE ANNUAL Big Sur Captain Cooper School carnival may have switched seasons, but it still promises the same fun and games. Because of the 1982 rains, the carnival has been switched to spring. This year's festivities will be celebrated from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 5 at the school just east of Highway 1 about 26 miles south of Carmel. There will be refreshments, games such as the dunk tank and cake walk, a white elephant sale, and raffle. The carnival annually raises between $2,000 and $3,000 for the parent club. The money is used for a variety of projects, including material purchases for teachers and upgrading the playground. Above in attendance at the 1982 carnival were: (from left) Michelle Bleck, Noel Walling, Heidi Crowley, Max Stromberger and Woodsey Owl. (Photo by Paula Walling.)

School trustees give nod to plan to close CHS campus

A PLAN to implement the closed campus program at the high school has been endorsed by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

Trustees gave their blessings to Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly's proposal during the May 30 board session.

However trustees do have some reservations about the proposal for a mandatory study hall, which would cost the district approximately $13,000 annually.

The question of whether to require a study hall or to make other, less costly arrangements probably will be taken up when the board meets in a budget study session at 3:30 p.m., Thursday, May 10 in the Carmel Middle School library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

Mrs. Kading-Kelly proposed the mandatory study hall to keep students with a free period from disturbing other classes and ease the noise in the library. Currently, most of the students with a free period either study in the library, go off campus, work on individual projects or sit outside on the lawn.

The major cost of the closed campus implementation program is the study hall. A supervisor would have to be hired at an estimated cost of $12,833 annually, Mrs. Kading-Kelly believes.

A separate noon duty supervisor would cost the district about $1,100 annually.

Trustees Feb. 14 ordered the campus closed this fall because of complaints from area merchants and also to maintain a day-long "educational atmosphere" on campus.

As part of the closed campus program, the principal proposes that a student activities commission be established to help plan more lunchtime events.

A revamped and more varied cafeteria service also is part of the program.

Students caught trying to sneak off campus will receive a reprimand the first time. After the first incident, delinquent students will receive suspensions.

In another item related to the high school, trustees awarded a $698,450 bid to Joseph B. Fratessa Associates of Monterey to renovate the more than 40-year-old campus.

Trustess also asked architect Fred Keeble to prepare a proposal to upgrade the photography lab, which would cost an estimated $45,000.

The board did not approve an estimated $108,600 proposal to paint the exterior buildings.

THE DISTRICT will pay for the renovation project out of the income received from the sale of Carmel Woods School, which is now the private Briarcliff Academy.

In other action April 30, trustees:

• Approved an approximately $30,000 lease-purchase plan for 29 new computers to be used at the high school and middle school.

Several groups will donate money to defray the costs, including Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), $10,000; and the middle school and high school parent clubs have pledged $3,500 each.

District administrators also had requested about $15,000 for computers to be used in the central office. But trustees rejected the proposal because of the cost.

• Delayed a counter-contract proposal that was scheduled to be presented to the Association of Carmel Teachers (ACT). The counter-proposal had not been prepared by the meeting time.

Teachers have not specified a requested pay hike percentage. Rather their proposal stipulates that trustees should allocate any new funds not anticipated for 1984-85 to teacher salaries.

• Budgeted $3,500 to pay for staff costs and consultant fees related to the long-range planning program to be undertaken this summer.

• Approved a plan to offer a limited academic program this summer for first through fifth graders. The board also wants to offer a writing workshop for eighth graders in August.

• Extended the contract for John Mahoney as the agent to lease the now-closed Carmelo School on Carmel Valley Road.

Mahoney would receive 6 percent of the lease agreement the first year and 2 percent for the following five years, under terms of the agreement.

Currently the campus is used for a private summer camp, and storage for Brinton's Hardware and La Playa Hotel.

Public forum scheduled May 9 on mission of high school

WOULD YOU like a voice in what Carmel High School should teach its students?

The community is invited to attend a forum on the mission of the high school that is to be held at 3 p.m. Wednesday, May 9 in the music room.

Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly will present a videotape made by educators on "defining general education." Participants then will be asked to meet in small groups to discuss an overall philosophy — or mission statement — for the district.

The entire forum group then will recommend a mission statement for consideration by the board of education when it meets May 14.

The mission statement is the first step in the Peer School Excellence Program that is designed to improve programs at the high school.

The school staff then is expected to prepare a report on what programs need to be added, eliminated or modified to implement that mission or philosophy.

The program is to begin this fall, under the timeline established by trustees.

Some of the questions the community will be asked to address at the May 9 forum include:

- How can we make sure that all our young people have access to the best education possible?
- What should be learned (and taught) to help students realize their full potential as individuals?
- What common understandings do students need in order to help resolve complex issues through the democratic decision-making process?
- What job skills should students acquire to help hone America's competitive edge in commerce, industry, science and technological innovation?
- How can we find, prepare, recognize and compensate good teachers?
- What are we willing to pay for what we want, and are there some resources we have been ignoring?

The community is invited to attend the forum and participants do not have to have children enrolled at the high school.

Mrs. Kading-Kelly does ask that those who want to attend call the high school (624-1821) so plans can be made to find a larger room if necessary.

Bloodmobile in Carmel Valley on May 10

The Red Cross/Community Hospital Blood Program will conduct a bloodmobile in Carmel Valley from 3 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Thursday, May 10.

The mobile unit from Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will be set up at the Carmel Valley Community Chapel on Village Drive. All blood drawn at Red Cross/Community Hospital bloodmobiles remains in the community to meet the needs of patients at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula and Monterey Peninsula Hospital.

The mobile will be staffed by Community Hospital personnel, assisted by Carmel-by-the-Sea Chapter American Red Cross volunteers. The Chapter's boundaries are the same as those of the Carmel Unified School District.

The need for blood is continual. Community Hospital makes every effort to be self sufficient in meeting the transfusion needs of patients through the local donor program.

Bloodmobiles have been conducted in Carmel Valley for 27 years, and the volunteer coordinator for all of those years has been Mrs. Tom (Marjorie) McKiernon. Mrs. McKiernon will be honored at the mobile on May 10 for her service to this community program.

For further information, or transportation to the mobile, please call Carmel Red Cross, 624-6921, or Community Hospital Blood Center, 625-4811.

Run-by-the-Sea winners

JOE SHERMAN of Carmel captured first place with a time of 31:45 minutes in the fifth annual 10-kilometer Carmel Run-by-the-Sea that, along with the one-mile fun run, attracted 450 entrants Sunday morning, April 29. The traditional benefit for the high school raised about $3,000 for sports and academic programs. Kevin Poole (boys) and Patty Murphy captured the fun run. The oldest 10K finisher was Jack Billwiller, 70, and the youngest was Kirk Veitch, 8. The youngest fun run entrant was Shaun Hart, 2. Winners were: Guillermo Marquez and Christy Murphy, ages 9-13; Leland Jones and Lan Chichster, 14-18; Joe Sherman and Patty Selbricky, 19-29; John Nelson and Nelly Wright, 30-39; Rudy MonDragon and Susan McDonald, 40-49; Glynn Wood and Vera Wesenburg, 50-59; Robert Schubert and Silvia Sweet, 60 and over. Instructor Rod Holmgren

Carmel man back home after teaching press techniques in China

By JOE LIVERNOIS

JOURNALISM instruction in Communist China might sound like a contradiction in terms, but Rod Holmgren of Carmel found Chinese students eager to learn the elements of style, if not the philosophy of a free press.

Holmgren, a retired Monterey Peninsula College journalism instructor and former radio commentator, returned to Carmel after he taught Chinese university students the techniques and technology of reporting for 15 months.

Holmgren is the seventh westerner invited to teach reporting skills at the Graduate Institute of Journalism in Beijing by the Chinese government since the end of the Cultural Revolution in 1976.

He said he believes the invitation to westerners to teach in China is an indication the country hopes to someday produce newspapers that are a bit more than mere propaganda sheets, though it was clear that Holmgren was not summoned to China to espouse American principles of freedom of the press.

"My colleague at the institute, Xu Chengshi, said to me that what they wanted was nuts and bolts journalism," Holmgren told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "They wanted the technology of jouralism and that is what I gave them. I told my students 'I'll teach you the way we do reporting and news writing and you can apply it however it is expected.' "

While stories of corruption, incompetence and waste — reports American journalists ache to write when they come up in the United States — abound in China, readers would never find them in Chinese newspapers.

But it is getting better.

When Mao Zedong imposed his repressive Cultural Revolution on China in 1949, Chinese newspapers became yawning conduits for Communist propaganda in which the only bad news printed was the daily threats from imperialists throughout the world.

In fact, when an earthquake centered in Tangshan killed more than 1 million people in 1976, it wasn't reported until four months later.

"The story was held up because the legend in China is that a natural disaster always precedes the end of a dynasty," Holmgren said.

BUT WITH MAO out of the way, things have loosened up considerably, he said. For instance, when a domestic airliner crashed into a military plane and 11 persons were killed last summer, it was reported within hours.

"And even then, some polishers (editors) criticized the reporting of it because it wasn't reported within minutes," Holmgren said. "Big stories like that still have to go through the bureaucracy."

The newspapers in China even followed up on the airport crash and included stories of the government report on the incident that blamed "pilot error," though they never questioned the government report despite Holmgren's own suspicion that the crash was the result of a mistake in the control tower.

Holmgren said he finds it ironic that while the American public complains loudly about the absence of "good news" in its publications, intellectuals in China now argue the benefits of including more "bad news" in Chinese newspapers.

After all, a newspaper looks darn foolish when it fails to report an earthquake that wipes out 1 percent of the entire population of the country.

Still, Holmgren was not invited to China to make glowing lectures about the First Amendment.

But he said he does feel he made inroads in reducing some of the stilted and redundant language problems evident in Chinese reporting.

For instance, the Chinese press routinely precedes all references to enemies to China with the terms "imperialists" or "hegemonistic" while it refers to its allies with such terms as "warm," "cordial" and "friendly."

Westerners who came to Beijing told the students that such terms should not be used without attribution. For instance, if a Chinese official uses the term "bellicose" when he describes Ronald Reagan, the term should be attributed to that official.

Holmgren said he also spent a lot of time with students shoring up redundancy problems.

"The trouble is, the Chinese language is such a redundant language," he said, and a shortage of newsprint in China requires concise writing.

ROD HOLMGREN dusted some of the souvenirs he collected during the 15 months he taught journalism in China. The former Monterey Peninsula College journalism instructor said he limited most his instruction to the "nuts and bolts" of reporting. (Photograph by Joe Livernois)

NEVERTHLESS, journalism students in China are not particularly excited about the prospects for unconditional freedom in their reporting in the near future, Holmgren said.

"I think students expect change to come very slowly," he said. "That's the nature of things in China. If the press is more open than it was in 1976, it still has a long way to go."

On the other hand, Chinese journalism students have great job security.

When Holmgren's students at the institute were accepted by institute officials, they were assured jobs when they finish their master's thesis for either Xinhua, the national news service, or the China Daily, an English language newspaper printed in China and New York.

"That made teaching much easier," he said.

Still, China is desperately attempting to recover from Mao's anti-intellectual Cultural Revolution, in which the incentive to produce was practically nil and which closed practically all schools in China.

"The generation coming of age is considered a lost generation," Holmgren said. "They are people who lost 10 of the best years of their lives."

The existing government represented by President Li Xiannian and premiere Zhao Ziyang has imposed a "responsibility system" that provides rewards and incentives for top workers in the techno-industrial sector of the cities and the top farm producers in the rural areas.

And China is hungry to get involved in the new American technology.

"The culture is still quite far behind ours but they are determined to catch up in their own way," Holmgren said. "They have a saying over there to the effect that 'we don't want to adopt any foreign culture, we want to adapt foreign cultures to our own.' "

ROD HOLMGREN of Carmel lectured his class of Chinese journalism students in Beijing, China. Holmgren was the seventh westerner to teach reporting skills at the Graduate Institute of Journalism since the end of the Cultural Revolution in 1976. The repressiveness of the Cultural Revolution was indicated by its newspapers: when an earthquake killed more than 1 million people in 1976, it was not reported in Chinese newspapers for four months.

Holmgren, who retired from MPC in 1979 after 20 years, said he did not have to adapt much to the Chinese culture upon arrival in October of 1982 though he found it wonderful to teach again.

A friend of Holmgren's — Jerry Werthimer, a San Francisco State University journalism instructor — had spent a year in Beijing as a "foreign expert."

HOLMGREN, a former chairman of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, had planned to return to England, where he had spent an earlier vacation hiking English trails.

When Holmgren wrote Werthimer of his vacation plans, Werthimer responded: "Forget England, come to China."

He finished off a semester started by a Melbourne, Australia professor drafted by UNESCO, then taught two six-month semesters in Beijing.

Though the Chinese media may not present the most complete look at current events in China, the newspapers are read closely by Chinese citizens, Holmgren said.

"There does not appear to be a big thirst for more information like there is in Russia, where everybody owns a short wave radio to get broadcasts from Europe," he said. "In all my time in China, I only met one guy who had a short wave and he was one of the more apolitical persons I ran across.

"I don't think many Chinese people even think about whether their informational needs are being met. But the public reads their newspapers quite closely."

One of the top newspapers is Renmin Ribao, or the People's Daily. It has a circulation of 8 million and is published simultaneously in at least seven different cities.

As a Sierra Clubber, Holmgren kept an eye on the environmental movement in China, which he said has become somewhat of a priority among the Chinese.

He said Chinese forests have been denuded over the years and efforts to protect the forests "have been more propagandistic than substantive."

But that is changing, also, he said. Holmgren reported that public officials are now visibly participating in the reforestation program in China in which each citizen must plant at least five trees every year.

He also watched with interest the "one couple, one child" policy imposed by the Chinese government. The policy severely penalizes couples who have more than one child.

The policy generates substantial controversy in China and — as a subtle signal of a more "open" press — newspapers run letters to the editor from persons who complain about the inequities in the policy.

On the other hand, there are a lot of letters to the editor that are not run. Instead, the editors' desks are more a clearing house for citizen complaints.

When a letter is written that complains of inefficiency in government factories, for instance, the letter is sent to the government bureau that oversees factory efficiency.

That would be an infuriating policy for American journalists to follow.

But then, that policy makes for newspapers full of nothing but "good news."

Carmel Valley Perspective

Water district directors ready to debate issue of Carmel River underflow

By JOE LIVERNOIS

AN ATTEMPT to resurrect a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District application for rights to the underground source of water in Carmel Valley could be made at the next water district board of directors meeting May 14.

Discussion of the matter is bound to set off more water district controversy but directors John Williams of Carmel Highlands and Patricia Bernardi of Carmel Valley appear ready to face the brunt of the inevitable flak.

Already, fellow water management district board member Ed Lee has called the attempt by Williams and Mrs. Bernardi to resurrect the so-called "underflow" issue a "political trick."

When the water district first applied to the California Water Resources Control Board for an appropriation to subsurface Carmel River water in December of 1982, the action prompted a lot of opposition from Carmel Valley well owners.

Already, fellow water management district board member Ed Lee has called the attempt by Williams and Mrs. Bernardi to resurrect the so-called 'underflow' issue a 'political trick.'

In fact, Mrs. Bernardi publicly counselled her fellow Carmel Valley property owners not to support the action if they did not understand its consequences.

Mrs. Bernardi was not then a water district board member and she told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook last week she both understood the consequences and supported the district action then.

But when water district officials attempted to explain the state board application to the public in early 1983, "it did a very poor job," Mrs. Bernardi said. "All (the district) succeeded in doing is getting everybody in an uproar."

She said a circular sent to Carmel Valley property owners "was not very clearly stated" and "you could never get a clear answer" to questions asked at a public meeting meant to explain the district action.

As a result of the clear opposition, the district never followed through on the application. Though it was never withdrawn, the application is now "pending" in the State Water Resources Control Board office.

But Mrs. Bernardi and Williams apparently are ready to urge other board members to seek a speedy resolution of the groundwater issue.

Williams said it is important to "settle the issue now because we need to settle the present uncertainty about what it might mean to our present water supply."

THE DISTRICT application for a groundwater appropriation is actually a straightforward, simple task. But it is surrounded by so many sub-issues and controversies that it is easy to understand why emotions run deep and why the public is so confused about its ramifications.

The application is based on a 1981 memorandum from Carla Bard, who was then chairwoman of the State Water Resources Control Board, to the director of the California Department of Fish and Game.

In that memo, Ms. Bard stated that the "question of underflow" would have to be explored when the water management district submits an application to the water resources control board to store water in its proposed new San Clemente Dam project on the Carmel River.

The district has moved forward with the dam project and is now in the process of preparing an environmental impact report for a dam that would hold 18,000 ac. ft. at the San Clemente site of the Carmel River.

The answer to the "question of underflow" would be whether or not the water pumped through wells in Carmel Valley actually flows through "known and definite channels."

If it does, according to California water laws, the water from the underground source could be "appropriated" to individuals, agencies or private companies.

At the same time, the state could determine exactly how much water could be extracted from Carmel Valley and the Carmel River and attach environmental conditions to any water extraction.

PATRICIA BERNARDI and John Williams, Monterey Peninsula Water Management District directors from the Carmel area, said they believe the water district should pursue an appropriation for subsurface water found in Carmel Valley immediately.

The water district filed for the appropriation almost 17 months ago with plans to reappropriate the underground water to the more than 300 owners of wells in Carmel Valley, including the productive California-American Water Co. wells.

In 1982, about 6,000 ac. ft. of water was pulled from the approximately 325 registered wells in Carmel Valley, including 4,600 ac. ft. in the 15 wells operated by Cal-Am, according to water management district figures.

When the state appropriates subsurface water which flows through known and definite channels, it usually attaches conditions to the appropriation. The water district expects those conditions to include environmental safeguards that would protect the vegetation along Carmel River that depends on the subsurface water, according to Williams.

Williams said the district should find out how much water can be extracted from Carmel Valley before it moves along too much further with its dam project. If the state rules that less water should be extracted from the aquifer, the district might consider planning for a larger dam, he said.

BUT LEE told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook he believes: "All John wants to do is show that you can restore the river without a dam. That way he can say the environmental benefits of a dam are not necessary. That is not true."

Lee supports construction of a dam and said he believes the water district should wait until it applies for an appropriation for water stored in the larger dam before it seeks an appropriation for subsurface water.

"Well owners in the Valley are legitimately concerned," he said. "Who knows what restrictions would be included? No one knows what a regulatory agency like the state board will do.

"And, anyway, why go to the state water board twice to look for appropriations? Why not have it all in one package? There's no reason to do it now."

Williams said it should be done now so the district can determine its water needs after the state board inevitably imposes its conditions on subsurface water extractions.

Mrs. Bernardi said Cal-Am has 'never initiated anything that was going to be for the public good' and, as a result, she supports the district application to the state for an appropriation because of the environmental benefits the state would impose with the appropriation.

Presently, nearly all of the 20,000 ac. ft. of water allocated to Monterey County and Monterey Peninsula cities comes from Carmel Valley, either from the river or from wells. An acre foot is 325,851 gallons.

Williams said the district could argue succcssfully with the state that the Valley can continue to contribute 20,000 ac. ft. annually "and still handle the environmental demands."

Still, he said, "there is a bit of a cloud of uncertainty about that."

Both the water district and Cal-Am have been able to apply for the appropriation at any time, but Williams and Mrs. Bernardi said Cal-Am never has because officials were wary of the potentially costly conditions the state would impose.

But Mrs. Bernardi said she is worried about the potential impacts on Carmel Valley well owners if Cal-Am should ever seek and gain appropriation of subsurface Carmel Valley water from the state.

If it did, Cal-Am could legally claim rights to all subsurface water and force other well owners to cap their wells, Mrs. Bernardi said.

She admits that she is "not sure what (Cal-Am) would or would not do," but added that Cal-Am has been "more and more unhappy" with the water district "since we're getting into a more regulatory mode with them."

Mrs. Bernardi said Cal-Am has "never initiated anything that was going to be for the public good" and, as a result, she supports the district application to the state for an appropriation because of the environmental benefits the state would impose with the appropriation.

BUT LARRY FOY, vice presiident of Cal-Am in its Monterey office, said the company has been responsible in its search for new water throughout its history in Monterey County.

Williams said the recent history of the subsurface water issue dates to when Cal-Am "was trying to get environmental approval" to drill the four new wells in Carmel Valley.

"Cal-Am was saying (the subsurface Carmel Valley water) was not underflow and Fish and Game was saying it was," he said.

"The result was an agreement in 1981, in which fish and game and Cal-Am would work together to develop ways to protect steelhead and, while that way going on, fish and game would not push the underflow issue."

Carla Bard and the State Water Resources Control Board approved of the agreement but she also said in her letter of approval that the underflow issue would have to be settled before an appropriation is made for water from the new dam.

"The question of underflow will need to be explored in detail at the time the district submits an application to the state board to store water upstream or attempts to develop an additional water supply by alternative means," she said.

The key to the issue, of course, is whether or not the water found underground is indeed travelling in a "known and definite channel."

Williams, who wrote the draft version of the Carmel River Watershed Management Plan before he was elected to the water district board in November, said he is convinced the subsurface water is indeed flowing.

He said water from the Carmel River seeps into the aquifer as it travels downstream and is therefore subject to appropriation.

"In practice, water pumped from wells is located in permeable alluvial deposits so near a stream that for practical purposes the well is taking water from the stream," he wrote in a working paper of his watershed management plan.

"The groundwater in Carmel Valley has direct hydrologic continuity with the surface flow, at least upstream from the Canada well (about three miles east of the mouth of the river. The general direction of the groundwater flow from bank to bank is parallel to the surface stream, disregarding meanders. The source of any groundwater flow beneath a confining layer in the lower valley is groundwater flow farther upstream."

FOY AND CAL-AM are equally certain that the underground source of water in Carmel Valley is not "underflow."

"It just depends on which expert you talk to on any given day," he said. "We have a difference of opinion." The water company has hired experts of its own to demonstrate that the underground source is not underflow, he said.

Despite assertions by Williams and Cal-Am, the State Water Resources Control Board would conduct an independent study of the subsurface water when the water district does follow through with its application. In addition, a public hearing would be conducted so state water board officials could hear testimony from other hydrologists and subsurface water experts.

If, after its own tests and the testimony of others, the state water board determines that the subsurface water is an "underflow" it can then grant an appropriation to the water district.

Williams said the pending application submitted by the water district 17 months ago lists all of the existing wells in Carmel Valley as "diversion points" and said the district would reallocate its appropriation to those well owners.

Foy said he does not understand why Williams and Mrs. Bernardi are in a hurry to pursue the appropriation of subsurface water. "If we have a new dam, the question becomes a little bit moot," he said.

"The question is, what is the intent? Their charter is to find additiional water supply, to augment the existing water supply. By going off and doing their studies, they haven't accomplished another drop of water."

Lee said he believes the issue has been raised as a ploy by Williams to negate the environmental benefits of the larger dam.

Lee said he believes that if the state imposes conditions to protect the environment of the Carmel River when it gives the district subsurface rights to the water, Williams will say that the environmental benefits that would occur when a larger dam is in operation are needless.

"He'll say that by putting conditions on underflow, it is going to completely help the river," he said. "It will absolutely not."

With a larger dam, a constant supply of water can be released from the dam throughout the year, Lee said, thereby benefitting the river environment. In fact, of the 18,000 ac. ft. that will be stored in the dam, only 5,000 ac. ft. will be available for domestic uses.

BEFORE THE SAN CLEMENTE Dam site of the Carmel River (above) is flooded by a larger dam, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will need to seek an appropriation for the water found beneath the ground in Carmel Valley. Several members of the water management district board say they believe the district should not wait until the dam project is ready to be built but should, instead, file for a groundwater appropriation immediately.

Would zoning code 'dismantle' business district?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

PROPOSED zoning code amendments to implement polices in the 1983 general plan "are a blueprint for dismantling the Carmel business district."

That is the opinion of Robert Evans, former forestry commissioner and current secretary of the Carmel Citizens Committee, who in an April 29 letter to the council blasted the proposed zoning code amendments.

A public hearing on proposed zoning code amendments will be conducted by the council when it meets in a special session at 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 14 at city hall.

City staff outlined the proposed zoning code amendments — which later will be developed in ordinance form — to the planning commission and city council in special sessions April 25 and April 30.

Conspicuously absent from the zoning code amendments are the issues of "second kitchens," parking and building design and size regulations.

These issues probably will be addressed in the next series of amendments, accordng to Assistant Planning Director Diane White.

"This is just the beginning," Mrs. White told the council and planners in the April 30 joint session.

But Evans believes the zoning amendments are more like the beginning of the end for the business district.

The amendments have several business control features, including:

• Creation of a "village preservation overlay" on Ocean Avenue between Monte Verde Street and Junipero Avenue.

Each new business in the village overlay will have to obtain a conditional use permit before opening. Conditional use permits have far more restrictions than business licenses.

Buildings in this area destroyed by fire, earthquake or other disaster also would be allowed to rebuild to original scale and size, under the new amendments.

• Strong language to amortize "non-conforming" businesses — shops in a zone that prohibits such uses, but which were there before the restriction was adopted by the city.

• Allows new inns only if the developer provides "a permanent housing" unit for each motel unit.

• Place a limit on the number of so-called "tourist-oriented" businesses, such as restaurants, art galleries, gift shops and jewelry stores.

FOR EXAMPLE, this control would allow the city to determine how many art galleries are in the zones that permit the use. If there are 47 art galleries in the central commercial zone, then no more than 47 will be allowed.

Under this provision, no new art galleries would be permitted unless one went out of business. Non-conforming art galleries would not be included in the "cap" number.

And the proposals would create a "buffer zone" where only service- or resident-oriented businesses are allowed.

These proposed stringent regulations irk Evans, who is a longtime resident with some commercial property interests in town.

Evans especially is concerned about the provisions that would give the city broad discretionary powers over use permits.

"The proposed zoning code amendments are a blueprint for dismantling the Carmel business district," Evans wrote. "Carried to their implied conclusion, they would cause enormous financial loss both to the city and to the businesses and properties affected.

"They would entrust to a few individuals discretionary powers readily subject to misuse. And it is extremely dubious that they would achieve their stated goal (to protect the residential character)."

Evans argues that a staff report errs when it states that resident-serving shops "have taken a back seat" to tourist-oriented businesses.

"In fact, very few resident needs are not served in Carmel at the present time and those few are readily available a mile from our southern boundary. Why some facilities have chosen to locate there is no mystery," he wrote.

"It has mainly has to do with parking and the size of the store required for a Safeway, Monte Mart, Long's or Brinton's. By now rents are a minor factor."

Evans also argues against the strong language to encourage amortization of non-conforming uses.

"Since all but a few uses will be conditional (thus potentially non-conforming), here is the mechanism by which the business district can be dismantled at the whim of the board of adjustments (also planning commission)," Evans wrote.

"In summary, the zoning code amendments turn the Carmel business district into a bureaucratic playground where values are subjected to the vagaries of staff judgment and the idiosyncrasies of non-elected planning commissioners. This would be bad enough if, no matter what the cost, any worthwhile results would ensue "

Council changes meeting time

The Carmel City Council will no longer operate in the dark — at least not for the first few hours of its meetings.

The council May 1 adopted on second reading an ordinance to change its meeting times from 7:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. The change will be effective with the first meeting in June.

The 17-minute May 1 council session may have been the shortest in history. The council agreed with staff to allocate $50,000 in revenue sharing funds to the cultural and social needs grants program.

Earlier in the day the council met for about 40 minutes. The council in a series of July Fourth related ordinances gave final approval to a ban on fireworks at the beach, prohibited fires on the beach after 10 p.m. and disallowed parking on Scenic Road and San Antonio Street.

Drug session May 8 in Carmel

How do you tell if your son is simply over- active or on speed? Are the pills in the bottle aspirin or "whites?"

When the community group We Care sponsored a meeting on the activties of the organization in March it was evident that many Carmel parents do not know the symptoms of drug use or how to identify the various illegal pills, cocaine or marijuana.

As a result of that session We Care has arranged a joint session with the Carmel Police Department and Monterey County Sheriff's Office for a demonstration on how to identify drugs and symptoms displayed by users.

The meeting, which is open to all community members, parents and students, will be from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. May 8 at the Carmel Youth Center, southwest corner of Torres Street and Fourth Avenue.

Peters to address CV Chamber

Monterey County Fifth District Supervisor William Peters is scheduled to speak at the monthly general membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce serving Greater Carmel/Carmel Valley May 9 at Carmel Valley Inn.

A question and answer period will follow Peters' talk.

The luncheon begins at 11:30 a.m. with no-host cocktails and lunch will be served at 11:45 p.m.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made through the chamber office at 659-4000 or through McKay Business Service, 26555 Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

The luncheon is not limited to chamber members but, since space is limited, reservations will be granted on a "first come, first served basis," according to Ms. Darcy.

The Conscience of Carmel

Zoning for the residents

By GUNNAR NORBERG

'THE CITY of Carmel-by-the-Sea is hereby determined to be primarily, essentially, and predominantly a residential city wherein business and commerce have in the past, are now, and are proposed to be in the future, subordinated to its residential character..."

These are the words city council members have framed on the wall of the chamber where they meet, and they are the words that stand at the head of the section of the municipal code which describes — and supposedly provides the reason for — all the city planning and city zoning which has been enacted since June 1929.

And they are also the words repeated in the newly revised general plan for which various implementing ordinances are in preparation. By the time you read this column, the city council will have met with its planning commission to discuss the first of the implementing ordinances, the one dealing with a revision of the boundaries of the various portions of the commercially zoned areas and also with proposed changes in the kinds of uses which are going to be allowed there.

After glancing through the many pages of this proposed ordinance, it strikes me that there is a need for attention to be centered once more on those words which I quoted at the beginning of this column and which quite unequivocally emphasize that Carmel was, and is, and wants to be a "residential city." And this emphasis plainly states that "business and commerce" are specifically to be "subordinated" in the process of operating that "residential city."

The draft ordinance I'm talking about says its "primary goal...is to preserve and protect the predominantly residential character of the city by providing a balanced mix of commercial and residential uses." My quarrel with this statement is that the balanced mix shown in the ordinance still does not sufficiently subordinate "business and commerce" if the real intent is to see that Carmel's essential status as a "residential city" is to be long maintained.

If there is to be a proper "balanced mix" in a city so determined as Carmel is to be its own kind of "residential city," there should ultimately be the sort of balanced mix suitable to such a city. Certainly there is not now such a balanced mix, nor is it likely that it can be achieved through the proposed ordinance as it stands.

I asked city hall for a breakdown of the business licenses now in effect in Carmel, and I've just received it. The total number of those licenses is 795 — with 20 more about to be issued.

This means that there is a business license in effect in the ratio of one per each half dozen people residing in Carmel, a ratio probably not achieved anywhere else in the state. And when you look into the kinds and numbers of business which hold those licenses, what you see certainly doesn't look anything like what you would find in any other small "residential city." Here's a look at the listing:

Types of Business	Number Holding Licenses
Apparel and accessories	90
Restaurants	69
Art galleries	76
Gift Shops:
Gifts and souvenirs	47
Antiques	24
Jewelry shops	37
Toys, hobbies, etc.	10
Total	118
Hotels and motels	48
Real estate offices	34
Hairdressers, manicurists, etc.	52
Food supplies (includes bakeries, specialty food stores, and the three remaining grocery stores)	27
Home furnishings	22
Professional offices, doctors, dentists, lawyers, etc.	50
Shoe shops	10
Book shops	9
Arts, crafts, creative shops	15
Drug stores	5
Horticulturists	11
Hardware store	1
Total	637

The rest of the 795 licensed businesses include such other activities as dress-making and alterations, cleaners and laundries, decorating, music shops, newspapers, plumbing, service stations, stationers, travel agencies, teaching services, theaters and a variety store.

AS YOU you can readily see, this residential city is certainly top-heavy with tourist-oriented businesses while the kinds of business which would ordinarily be most useful to people who actually reside in Carmel are dwindling down. And this has happened and continues to happen because the tourist-oriented businesses drive out the residentially useful ones, simply because they are able to pay the fantastically escalating rents which commercial property owners demand.

This situation not only deprives residents of the services they would otherwise enjoy, but at the same time it forces more and more of the owners of such businesses, who have usually resided within the city, to leave Carmel and thus to deprive the city of the mind and muscle they contributed to the kind of city Carmel had long ago chosen to be.

When I was mayor, I proposed the city council consider the application of rent control to the commercial properties, and the council employed what was believed to be the outstanding lawyer and law professor who had specialized in rent control laws and who was considered an authority in that field.

That lawyer concluded that rent control could reasonably be tried in view of the enormously rising rents which were demanded here. However the council failed to follow through with an actual rent-control law.

But there is an entirely legal way to begin to restore the kind of situation in the business district which would, in the long run, start to reverse the present excessive tourist-oriented trend.

That legal way to go is to use the authority every city in California has, under the state government code, to plan and to zone to keep the city the kind of city it wants to be.

While there is in the city's proposed draft ordinance some use of the authority in the government code to which I'm alluding, there is still little use made of the "intensity of land use" provision. This provision makes it possible to space out uses which have become excessive. Under this provision, it would be possible to write into city law that, for example, no motel — or restaurant, or clothing store, or gift shop, or art gallery — could be established within 500 feet (or some other number of feet) of another motel, or restaurant, or clothing store, or gift shop, or art gallery.

Because of the very large numbers of such businesses already in the Carmel business district, such a spacing-out law could completely close the door against any proposed new business of the same kind. This would not shut down any existing business of any of these kinds, but merely make the existing ones non-conforming.

If, at any future time, any one of those businesses would close down, or wish to move into a then permitted use, there would be one less of the kind considered excessive.

If the kinds of businesses the Carmel City Council considers excessive would no longer be allowed to invade the city, landlords would no doubt have to begin to lower their sights as far as the amounts of rent they could get and the City of Carmel would gradually begin to be more like a "residential city." Dedicated Carmelites could then start to shout "Eureka!" which also happens to be the motto of California and which means "I have found it!"

Taylor appointed recreation supervisor

Steve Taylor, a teacher at Carmel River School, has been appointed the city's first recreation supervisor.

Taylor's selection to the summer position was announced by City Administrator Doug Schmitz in a letter to the council dated April 27..

Taylor will be responsible for the implementation of a limited summer recreation program that will be offered from mid-June to early August.

The council has allocated $21,000 in the 1983-84 municipal budget to pay for the supervisor's salary and programs.

Taylor is expected to resume his teaching duties this fall.

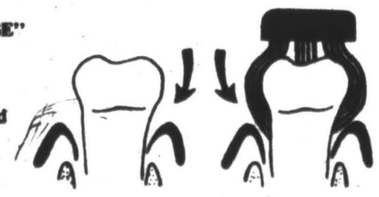
Because the bristles are bent to reach the sulcus. The sulcus is the space between the teeth and the gum where the bacteria grow, cause caries and bad breath. The outer bristles are curved and soft to protect and clean the gums. The center bristle is short and stiff to clean the top of the teeth.



SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.
Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

Briarcliff benefits from fund-raiser

By SUSAN CAROL CANTRELL

The wheel of fortune favored Briarcliff Academy on April 27 with a sizeable turnout for its first big fund-raiser.

"Hopefully, this will earn money for the school," said Chairwoman Merrill Manke of Monterey, whose husband Chris, a Carmel dentist, was "just helping out." It's all in the family, since his daughter now attends the school he once attended when it was Carmel Woods School.

Rancho Canada was transformed into Casino Royale by the same outfit which supplied the Jesters Great Circus Gambol, to which Mrs. Manke added: "I lost a lot of money at that one!"

There were ripples of excitement at the "canned" casino when gamblers tossed the dice or watched the wheel in anticipation of a win.

Items displayed for a silent auction ranged from a 25-pound sack of dog food to stuffed unicorns. And the live auction, scheduled to begin at 11 p.m., featured such prizes as two nights in Reno and a Tibetan prayer rug, donated by Conway of Asia. But the "really big show" was a one-week trip for two to Hawaii for the winning raffle ticket.

Headmaster Gerry Traynor enjoyed a round of blackjack with his wife Lynn and explained the difference between headmasters and principals. "You're a business manager when you're a headmaster," he said of the successfully-tripled student body in his two years of leadership.

He spoke of his eight years of administration with Carmel Unified School District. "It is as different as night and day. At Briarcliff, parents and kids want to be there. We don't have to wait for decisions to come down from Sacramento. It's clean, efficient, and there is a genuine family aspect. They're a good breed of people!"

The private kindergarten through seventh grade private school will expand to include eighth grade next year.

LOCAL WOMAN RECEIVES FELLOWSHIP IN HISTORY

Amy Louise Erickson, daughter of John and Carole Erickson of Carmel Valley, recently received this year's Una Fellowship in history at the University of California, Berkeley.

An award dinner in her honor was given at the UCB faculty club. "It's a gorgeous old redwood shingled building — one of the original buildings on the campus," said Mrs. Erickson. Vichyssoise, veal with capers and lemon mousse were the cuisine for the 35 guests who attended. Among them were the dean of the graduate division, William Shack, and his wife.

Edward Hunter Ross gave the 14th award, in memory of his wife Una Ross, which is a total scholarship with living and travel expenses for one year.

"Una Ross was an unusual woman from the Midwest who went to Berkeley," Carole said. "She was eccentric and very into women's education. She didn't think women should sit around doing needlepoint."

Amy does both! One of her hobbies, when she has time out from her demanding schedule of studies, is just that. And she was instructed by the best — Diane Kajikuri, internationally-known needlepoint expert, who met with Amy at All Saints' Episcopal Day School in Carmel Valley. Another teacher of influence there was Beva Farmer, who taught calligraphy to Amy.

Amy was also active in drama while she attended Carmel High School, and was instructed by yet another outstanding tutor: Diana Hardy, with whom she is still friends. Amy has extended this interest to work as assistant stage manager for the Carmel Bach Festival.

The award given to this outstanding history student was not solicited by the student; rather she was nominated by professors in her department. One of the highlights of the recognition was a garnet necklace, donated by Una Ross, which is removed from the vault yearly and which the recipient is allowed to wear for the evening.

Amy, who also attended the Montessori School, wrote an impressive senior thesis which helped her to win the award. It is about inheritance rights of women in Yorkshire in the 16th and 17th centuries and is based on original research she did at York University of York, England while she was there during her junior year on an exchange program.

"She was pointed to a box of about 130 hand-written wills tied in ribbons in a box in an ancient building," said her mother. "She's always been enthusiastic about the research."

She always has been interested in women's studies, and since there is no such course at Berkeley, she undertook to incorporate them into her history program. She added that these women being researched were not of the aristocracy, but of the working class.

Amy is single and lives in San Francisco with her sister who graduated from Williams College in Massachusetts in English and economics. "Amy's career is undecided. Perhaps she'll do college teaching," Carole Erickson said of her daughter.

IBSENS EMBARK UPON GASTRONOMIC ADVENTURE

Debra Sponder and Gary Ibsen, who were married Feb. 25 in Carmel Highlands, recently left on their honeymoon designed around wine and food adventures in Italy.

Debra recently opened Myron's Elephant restaurant in Carmel, with her father Mike (Myron) Sponder. Gary, who was publisher of Adventures in Dining magazine for several years, and was creator/managing editor of Monterey Life magazine, is currently marketing manager for the Monterey Vineyard and Taylor California Cellars.

Their sojourn began April 27, with a two-day seminar in wine-making at the University of California, Davis. Then they went on to Bologna, Italy for two weeks of Marcella Hazen's famed cooking at the Hotel Milano Excelsior on Via Pietramellare followed by a course on Italian wines.

Food critic James Beard said that spending "a week or two with Marcella in Italy is a sensually exciting experience of almost encyclopedic quality — a total experience in food."

Their classes will include a visit to Parma, the fabled food town, to learn production and aging of true Parmesan cheese; dining in private homes and elegant celebrated restaurants; morning shopping in the marketplace; special workshops in pasta, oils, seasonings, fish preparation and more.

While they visit the wine country of Italy, Debra and Gary have been invited to the Brolio Castle, owned by one of the oldest Tuscan wine-making families, and to the Bersans Winery, which contains a collection of some of the world's oldest wine-making machinery. "We also should have an opportunity to present some of Monterey County's finest wines along the way."

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA ALUMNAE

The Kappa Kappa Gamma alumnae will meet for a 12:30 p.m. luncheon on May 2 at the home of Mrs. Peter Dyer. For more information please call Mrs. Richard F. Jones, 624-9083.

SORORITY ORIENTATION PARTY

Monterey Bay Panhellenic Association invites all high school seniors who plan to attend a four-year college to a sorority orientation party from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. on May 9 at the community room at The Crossroads, Carmel. A slide show titled "What is a Sorority?" will be presented, refreshments will be served and questions answered. RSVP Miss Rebecca Tupin at 394-6550.

SYMPHONY GUILD EXTRAVAGANZA

April in Paris? That's what the Monterey Symphony Guild has dubbed it. The extravaganza will include games, a French poolside picnic lunch and a ball at the Hyatt Del Monte on the day and evening of May 5. The ball will be $75 per person or $100 for a ringside seat. The play day will include a game and lunch for $25. Proceeds will benefit the Monterey Symphony Orchestra. For further information contact Rebecca Flavin, 373-3978.

KRISTA MOSES ON DEAN'S LIST

Krista S. Moses, a Carmel resident, has been named to the dean's list at Seattle Pacific University for superior scholarship. Her major is nursing and she attends school with 2,800 students.

FRANK SAULSBURY PROMOTED

Frank Saulsbury has been recently appointed to product manager for the Mauna Loa Macadamia Nut Line (m-m-m, you know the nuts). Frank received his MBA from the University of Southern California after he earned his undergraduate degree at the University of California, Berkeley.

He was born in Carmel and attended Carmel High School in 1972. His mother is a real estate broker in the area.

"You may be interested that I got my start in business selling Pine Cones (newspapers) after school. I also covered Carmel High events as your photographer when Carlton Brown was editor," he said.

IN HER MOTHER'S satin gown, Maria Emily Calcagno will be wed to Richard Etheredge at Carmel Mission May 5.

MARIA CALCAGNO TO WED

Maria Emily Calcagno of San Jose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Calcagno of Carmel, will wed Richard Alan Etheredge of Sunnyvale at the Carmel Mission on May 5. Maria is a graduate of Carmel High School, and is employed as a dietician. Richard, a graduate of San Jose State University, is a manufacturing engineer.

The couple will return to Sunnyvale to live after a wedding trip to Canada.

Business Beat

Catching up with people

By FLORENCE MASON

BUSINESS is about people, as this week's business news amply demonstrates.

MOVING OUT...

A process that Royal and Robert Adams began in 1982, with the sale of the first of their three Carmel businesses, is nearing completion today.

Adams II was the first to go, when the Adamses sold that Fifth Avenue shop to their longtime manager, Richard Scudder. Now I can report that they have sold the lease on Adams Eden of Flavor and the business they called Adams Pot-Bellied Stove, also on Fifth between Mission and Junipero.

An obviously pleased Royal Adams told me that the Pot-Bellied Stove has been purchased by a local woman who will continue that business much as it has been. (More about that in a future column.) But the business of Adams Eden of Flavor has not been sold — just the lease on the space.

"The business is moving with us to Carmel Valley," Royal said. "We're getting a farm and yes, it will be our home, too." The details are fascinating: "A horse in the backyard; we'll be raising chickens that lay eggs in many different colors; we'll grow raspberries and lemons and fruit and herbs."

Royal did not want to reveal the exact location of the farm until the financial details are settled (probably in June or July). However, she did say that Eden of Flavor sales will continue through phone and delivery until the business is fully set up at the farm; then it will be a mail order and wholesale business from there.

Coffees, teas, herbs and spices are among the delectables the Adamses will continue to offer in this new and, for them, eminently satisfying way.

AND MOVING IN...

When Richard and Mary Thorsen came to Carmel on their honeymoon, more than 27 years ago, it was the beginning not only of their married life but also of a dream. Returning to this area at least once every year, they dreamed of eventually moving here. Last November, they finally "put everything together" and made the move.

The move also means a whole new career for Richard, a Certified Public Accountant, and his wife, who has been "mostly a homemaker," with some retail experience. They are the new occupants of the space on Fifth Avenue which has housed Adams Eden of Flavor. Their shop is "New Traditions."

Thorsen explained the name, and their concept: "We will be selling reproductions of early American and country furnishings. It's 'new' because they are reproductions, and 'traditions' because they are traditional in style and materials. We will feature hand-crafted, American-made home furnishings."

The shop will also be the setting for classes in stenciling and in quilt-making, two of Mary Thorsen's special talents. All of the Thorsens' plans were well thought out before they made the move to Carmel; the classes fit in with the total concept of New Traditions.

Golf was another attraction this area offered Richard Thorsen. The couple lives in Pacific Grove. They have a daughter in Kansas City, and two grandchildren; their son is at Fresno State. Their intentions are firm: "We want to spend the rest of our years here, as part of the community."

ADDING SIX

There's more than a change of name behind the fact that Over the Rainbow is becoming Carmel Glass Art. It's a new and different solution to an increasingly common problem on the Carmel business scene.

As explained by Rainbow co-owner Patti Cordano Curnow: "It's very hard for individual artists to make a go of it in downtown Carmel now, so we are going to do it differently."

The difference is that Patti and her sister, Mary K. Cordano, who have used their Mission Street (Court of the Fountains) location as a working studio for eight years, are being joined by six other stained glass artisans and are converting the studio into a place for the retail sale of panels, lamps, doors and other stained glass objects. Each of the artists will work in his or her own studio and bring the products together at the Mission Street location — Carmel Glass Art.

The genesis of the change was an exhibit of stained glass at the Monterey Museum of Art, in which Patti and Mary K. were invited to participate, along with six other stained glass artists. When the exhibit closed, the sisters were approached by the others and gradually an unformed idea grew into this specific concept. Details — including the exact shape of the association — are still to be worked out.

When Patti addressed the Carmel business license board for the group, one member of the board, Sandy Swain, chairwoman of the Carmel Planning Commission, commented: "This is a classic example of what happens when rents go sky-high in town. I'm very happy with the solution you are working out."

CHANGING STATUS

Coco Cunningham, the first employee of Carmel's Tourist Information Service, is now one of its owners. Speaking of herself and co-owners Patricia Schied and Mary Hughes, Coco said: "We've all been working together about eight years." Part of that time, they were associated with Mary and David Hughes in "David's" on Ocean Avenue; for the past four years the three women have been developing services for visitors to the area. Their business is at the corner of Ocean Avenue and Mission Street, above the Mediterranean Market.

"It's doing well," Coco confirmed, "especially our roomfinder service, which is free. Our whole objective is to help people find their way around Carmel." Coco has her own specialty among those services, helping people make plans for their very special weddings in Carmel.

Ms. Cunningham grew up in Carmel and attended River School, Carmel Middle School and Carmel High. Single, she lives in town and delights in walking to work every day. Her new Sheltie is another inspiration for getting out and about.

RETURNING

Friends of Csaba Ajan, who for 10 years was vice president and general manager of Quail Lodge, will have a chance to welcome him back to this area as general manager of the new Monterey Plaza Hotel on Cannery Row.

Ajan was recently named vice president of operations for the RKO/Rossi Hotel Company, which is building the Monterey Plaza. As such he will also have operating responsibilities for the company's hotels in Tucson, San Diego and Miami.

Before leaving the area, Ajan held management positions at the Covey Restaurant in Carmel Valley and at the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club. Most recently, he was vice

CLOSING

The first shop to open in The Crossroads — in December 1981 — has closed its doors. The Baobab Collection, which opened just seven and one-half months after groundbreaking for the ambitious new shopping center, closed primarily because "the backers of the corporation didn't want to continue with an arms-length operation," according to owner Rod Lindsay.

His original co-owner, Dirk Daniels, moved from the area some months ago. Lindsay's plans are to return to Africa and then to practice law again, "probably in Florida."

It seems sad to me that the beautiful shop, which featured rugs, tapestries, wallhangings, shawls, ostrich skin bags and Botswana baskets, has closed. I recall that when I first talked to the two young men, they were opening the shop with the conviction that "people in this area will appreciate the unusual merchandise we offer." Some certainly did: "We made many friends here," Lindsay said.

FORE!

There's something new for golfers in Pebble Beach. "One thing just led to another" is how golf pro John Buczek explained it.

Buczek's plan is to offer golf clinics, each of which will run for one week. The first is scheduled to start next Sunday, May 6 and the second begins June 3. Instruction will be by a regular staff of top teachers from around the country, Buczek said.

"In addition, there will be one day each week when a named tour professional will be here for the day," Buczek said. Johnny Miller is the tour professional for the first clinic, and Danny Edwards is scheduled for June. Video and sequence photograph cameras will also be part of the teaching process. "The clinic is designed to meet the demands of each person's ability," Buczek said.

The clinics are planned in conjunction with The Lodge at Pebble Beach. Participants will stay at The Lodge for the week and have "three elaborate meals" there each day.

Buczek opened an office in Carmel for the golf clinics. It is upstairs in Pantilles Court, where he shares space with Harold Firstman, the originator and producer of the Spalding Pro-Am golf tournament and Buczek's associate in this new enterprise.

Buczek's participation in the Spalding led to the two men's acquaintance and then to discussion of Buczek's innovative idea. He played in the Spalding each year for nine years, with one tie for second place in which he lost to Carmel Valley's Bobby Clampett. He also participated in several Crosbys.

Before he moved to Carmel, Buczek was the golf pro at the Plainfield Country Club in New Jersey. His wife, Dariel, is an artist whose love for the area was one of the forces that motivated the couple's move from Plainfield, where they had lived for 11 years.

EXPANDING

A business that began in Carmel in 1904 and moved to the Valley in 1959 has just taken another major step in its development: M.J. Murphy's has built a new store. The firm — still owned by the Murphy family corporation — bought property adjoining its location across from the Bank of America in Carmel Valley Village and jumped from 1,000 sq. ft. to 4,000 sq. ft. in size.

Manager Dan Gladney said that the additional space makes M.J. Murphy's "a full-line hardware store and lumber yard." New lines have been added, including household and kitchen items — "the kinds of things you buy every day" — and a full line of paints. It's still do-it-yourself and builders' headquarters, with a lot more space for lumber, plumbing and electrical supplies, brick, fencing and other things that have been there all along.

When Murphy's opened in Carmel it was a lumber yard in the area now occupied by Carmel Plaza. In 1945, the family bought property in the Village for a drying yard, and in 1959, all of the activities of the firm moved out to the Valley.

A POCKETFUL OF NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Benedict of Carmel will be in Hawaii very soon for a luxury vacation. The reason this is a business as well as a social note is that the lucky Benedicts won their trip in a drawing conducted by San Francisco Federal Savings and Loan during its week-long celebration of the consolidation of the association's two local offices.

Included in the trip are hotel accommodations for one week, with all expenses paid, and a rental car. The couple has never been to Hawaii, but said, "We've always wanted to vacation there!"

There's a new independent insurance agency on the peninsula: Carmel resident Charles Veatch has joined the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers of the Monterey Peninsula.

Veatch moved to this area from Southern California three years ago and is already an active member of the community as a member of the Carmel Kiwanis Club, the Church of the Wayfarer (where his wife, Eula Mae, is secretary) and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. An avid golfer, he is also a marshal for the Crosby tournament.

In Southern California, Veatch had been an officer with Marsh & McLennan and the broker for several companies, including the largest tugboat operation in the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors.

Another member of the independent insurance agents group has a new director of insurance operations. James Thompson of Carmel Valley was appointed to that position with the Carmel Insurance Agency.

Thompson is a licensed insurance broker with 15 years' experience in the industry, and he is a member of the Society of Certified Insurance Counselors. Most recently, he was sales representative for Firemen's Fund.

M'Lady Bruhn's recent "remodeling sale" was just the beginning. The women's shop on Ocean Avenue is getting a major face lift, with new paint, new carpets, lighting and even new mirrors.

Michelle Jordan will be promoting In Room Video Inc. and its new Visitors Information Channel. That's the visitor service plan available in many motels and hotels in Carmel as well as elsewhere on the peninsula.

The multi-talented Ms. Jordan is a speech and drama graduate of the University of Missouri-Columbia, and she has an extensive theatrical background. A professional golfer, she was Golf Digest's most recent "Ms. Golf."

Obituaries

Henry Williams

A tribute to the memory of Henry Meade Williams of Carmel, a writer, editor, publisher and bookstore owner, took place April 28 at the family home for his family and friends. He died April 24 at Community Hospital at the age of 84.

Born May 1, 1899 in New York City, the son of Jesse Lynch Williams, whose play Why Marry? received the Pulitzer Price in 1917, he grew up in a literary atmosphere. He worked for the Sears Publishing Co., was an editor of The American magazine, and was the author of more than 150 short stories which appeared in Collier's, Saturday Evening Post and other leading magazines.

In World War II, he enlisted in the Navy at the age of 17. At the end of the war, when he was 20, he walked from New York to Santa Barbara, where he was employed to sit in the front window of a shoe store advertising the boots he wore to walk across the country.

Back in New York, he met Mona Goodwyn in 1928, when she came to him to publish one of her stories. He did not accept the story, but the couple was married the following year and made their home in Princeton, N.J.

With a young son and daughter, the family moved to Carmel in 1936, where he and his wife continued their writing careers and became active members of the cultural life on the peninsula. He opened the Wells' Book Store in 1958 and operated it until 1968. He also served on the Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library and was president of the group for a time.

In addition to his wife, survivors include his two daughters, Karen Lyon and Lacy Faia, both of Carmel; his son, Christopher of Los Angeles, and six grandchildren.

Cremation was conducted by the Mission Mortuary.

Etta Mae Katzung

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea, followed by inurnment at Skyline Memorial Park in San Mateo, for Etta Mae Katzung, a resident of Hacienda Carmel who died April 23 at Community Hospital after a sudden illness. She was 91.

She was born June 29, 1892 in Athelstane, Quebec, Canada and lived on the Monterey Peninsula since 1980, when she moved here from Burlingame.

She was a member of the Carmel Foundation.

Survivors include her daughter, Marjorie Specht of Burlingame, and two grandchildren.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Carmel Foundation or the Hacienda Carmel employees' fund.

Clara Blanchard

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Clara C. Blanchard, a resident of Carmel Valley Manor who died April 23 at home. She was 83.

Born June 2, 1900 in Brooklyn, N.Y., she was a resident of the peninsula since 1964.

She is survived by her niece, Mrs. Cena Blanchard of Santa Barbara.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to a charity of the donor's choice.

Lee Roy Wise

Services took place April 26 at the Paul Mortuary, followed by burial at El Carmelo Cemetery in Pacific Grove, for Lee Roy Wise, retired master mechanic who lived in Carmel Valley for the past six years. He died April 22 at his home after a lengthy illness. He was 72.

Born Sept. 7, 1911 in Marlow, Okla., he served as a sergeant in the Army Air Corps during World War II and was an oil field master mechanic in Bakersfield for 30 years before he moved to the Monterey Peninsula.

He was a member of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 12 of Los Angeles.

Survivors include his wife, Electa; his daughter, Sharon Lee McAdoo of Bakersfield; his son, Barry N. Ball of Gresham, Ore.; his mother, Minnie Lee Wise of Bakersfield; two sisters, Helen Von Werner of Bakersfield and Fern Bagwell of San Luis Obisop; four brothers, Harold of Hawthorne, Allan of Long Beach, Claude of Los Angeles and Melvin of San Clemente, and six grandsons.

Rev. William Welch of the Carmel Presbyterian Church officiated at the services.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Ayotrophic Lateral Sclerosis Society of America, 15300 Ventura Blvd., Sherman Oaks, Calif. 91403.

Hallie S. Lafrenz

Private services have been held for Hallie Samson Lafrenz, designer and builder of many of the early "fairy tale" cottages in Carmel, who died April 23, at home, following a long illness. She was 87.

Born Aug. 3, 1896 in Boise, Idaho, she and her husband came to Carmel in the early 1920s from San Francisco and re-established their importing business, The Der Ling Company.

They were among the first members of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club and the Carmel Art Association, and were active in community and local business and real estate affairs in Carmel for many years.

Among the many cottages designed and built by Mrs. Lafrenz are the Cottages by the Sea on San Antonio Street.

Survivors include her husband, Adolf Charles Lafrenz; a sister, Mrs. Walter Scott of Portola Valley; a newphew, George W. Booth of Carmel; a niece, Mrs. William F. Mitchell of Carmel. Sisters Mrs. George W. Booth of Piedmont and Carmel and Lady Maurine Grantham of London, England, preceded her in death.

Cremation is scheduled with the Paul Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

The family prefers memorial gifts to the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club Trust, P.O. Box 1972, Carmel, 93921.

Wilma M. Downs

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for Wilma Mitchell Downs, known as Willie, a resident of Pebble Beach for 14 years, who died April 20 at her home after a period of failing

FOCUS fund-raiser

FRIENDS of the Carmel Unified School District (FOCUS) hopes to raise about $20,000 by the time its phone-a-thon membership drive is concluded later this month. FOCUS sent a letter home to parents in March and has held several phone-a-thons as a follow-up to the membership applications. Several FOCUS members have pledged to match the money raised from the drive, which thus far has raised about $9,300. With the matching pledges the event has generated about $18,600 for FOCUS. The organization donates this money to various projects in the district schools. The Carmel Valley stock brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch donated the telephones and office space for the phone-a-thon. Above are Merrill Lynch Resident Vice President Michael O'Leary (standing) and Al Crosby, FOCUS fund raising committee coordinator.

CARMEL VALLEY COMMUNITY CHAPEL

health. She was 66.

Born April 27, 1917 in Sanger, she accompanied her husband, Donald, on various international assignments with the diplomatic corps.

Survivors include her husband; three sisters, Mrs. Robert Ross of Carmel, and Mrs. Chester A. Andrews and Virginia Lus, both of Fresno; and a brother, William Mitchell of Fresno.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula or the American Cancer Society.

Isa M. Parsons

Cremation took place at the Monterey City Cemetery, followed by ashes scattered at sea, for Isa M. Parsons, a Carmel Valley resident, who died April 18 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital after a lengthy illness. She was 81.

Born Jan. 23, 1903 in England, she was a resident of Carmel Valley for 25 years.

Survivors include her son, Keith of Honolulu; her daughter, Ann Egli of Carmel Valley; her brother Malcolm Moores of Carmichael; five grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

WHALES WERE ALMOST EXTINCT

The gray whales which annually migrate 10,000 miles from the Arctic to Baja California, past the shores of the Monterey Peninsula, were nearly extinct 30 years ago. Since they have become a totally protected species, estimates on the herd's total now range from 12,000 to 15,000.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

There was quite a party in Elkhart, Texas, recently as the town celebrated a very special occasion, "Ila and Ida Day." Ila Foster and Ida McGahey, identical twin sisters, were observing their 100th birthday. "I've done as much hard work in my life as anybody who's not a convict," said Mrs. McGahey. The twins were joined around a 100-candle birthday cake by members of their family, including their "baby" twin sisters, Ada and Ava, who are only in their 80s.

According to Dr. Everett Smith, director of biogerontology at the University of Wisconsic, diet and exercise are the best preventive measures against osteoporosis, the progressive thinning of bones which can result in sever back pain, fractures and decreased height. Higher calcium intake and exercises like jogging, walking and biking can slow down, and sometimes even prevent, the condition. Consult your own doctor about such a diet and exercise program.

Annual charity event

A weekend rugby riot in Pebble Beach

COLLINS FIELD at Pebble Beach will be the final testing ground for the 1984 National Collegiate Rugby Championship as the Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament plays host to 36 bone-shattering teams this week.

The bloody and sometimes muddy game will be played Saturday and Sunday, May 5-6. Organized under the auspices of the United States of America Rugby Football Union, the National Collegiate Club Championship is the culmination tournament for territorial finalists representing colleges and universities from the East, Midwest, West and Pacific Coast.

The collegiate championship this year will run concurrently with and highlight the 26th annual Monterey National Invitational Rugby Tournament, co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees and the Northern California Rugby Football Union.

Proceeds from ticket and concession sales go to aid local charities and community-wide projects as well as Northern California Youth Rugby.

The Monterey Peninsula is acknowledged as the hotbed of rugby in the United States. It is a game developed in an English boys' school in the 1500s.

It all started here 26 years ago when Paul "Boomer" Andrew, a California football alumnus, brought rugby to neutral Central California to decide a Northern and Southern California state playoff.

Eleven teams turned out the next year and the tournament has grown and prospered since, mainly through the co-sponsorship of the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees who organize the fields, concessions, medical support, publicity, ticket sales and social services.

The Northern California Rugby Union handles team invitations, referees and tournament play.

Competing teams will come from as nearby as Pebble Beach, home to the Monterey Rugby Football Club, and as far as Honolulu, home to the Hawaii Harlequins Football Club.

Play begins at 7 a.m. Saturday and at 8 a.m. Sunday. Tickets may be purchased the days of the tournament at the Highway 1 gate entrance to Pebble Beach as well as at Collins Field. Admission is $5 for the day, $9 for the weekend. For more information, call 646-8310.

The famed Oakland Ballet will grace Sunset Center stage May 4

TWO NEW WORKS of the Oakland Ballet that display a dazzling range of skills will be on the program when the company makes its appearance this year as part of Carmel's Festival of Dance.

The program begins at 8 p.m. Friday, May 4 at the Sunset Theater, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel. It opens with Street Songs, choreographed by Val Caniparoli, a dancer and choreographer with the San Francisco Ballet.

One of Caniparoli's first ballets, the work was inspired by and set to music by composer Carl Orff, and has been hailed for its sense of fun and imagination.

Also on the program will be a starkly contrasting work, Death and the Maiden, by London's Ballet Rambert Director Robert North. North considers Death and the Maiden to be "one of my most important pieces; a milestone in my career."

Rounding out the repertoire will be the Trois Gymnopedies set to the haunting music of Erik Satie and by popular demand an encore performance of Ravel's Bolero.

Tickets are $7.75 and $8.75. Reserved seating is available. For more information, call 624-3996.

RON THIELE and Shirlee Reevie appear in Gymnopedies, an Oakland Ballet production to be presented Friday, May 4 at the Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Laguna Seca offers dream weekend for area race fans

THE 21ST Annual Nissan Monterey Triple Crown, set for Saturday and Sunday, May 5-6, has grown to become a six-race affair for 1984.

This traditional opener to the Northern California sports car racing season will be marked by a diversity of car categories competing at picturesque Laguna Seca.

The main event, which will feature only the prototype cars of the International Motor Sports Association's Camel GT Series, will be the Red Lobster 100. This shoot-out of the exotic sports cars, including the Red Lobster restaurant company's own Chevrolet-March driven by Kenper Miller, is one of only two sprint races on the IMSA schedule for 1984.

Also scheduled are the Camel GTO/GTU, the Champion Spark Plug Challenge, the Renault Alliance Cup, the Nor-Am Pro Fords and the Northern California debut of the new Jim Russell Mazda Pro Series.

Some of the entries in the Red Lobster Camel GT 100-miler include Bob Tullius and Doc Bundy in a pair of Jaguars; Tom Blackaller in Wayne Baker's Porsche 935; Klaus Ludwig and a driver still to be named in a pair of Mustang GTP vehicles; Sarel Van der Merwe, winner of the 24 Hours of Daytona in the Kreepy Krauley March; ageless John Morton in the Conte Lola; Gianpiero Moretti in the MOMO-Ford and Bill Whittington and Randy Lanier in Chevy March cars.

Saturday will be reserved for qualifying on the 1.9-mile Laguna Seca circuit, halfway

Music society to present awards

THE CHAMBER Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula will present the 13th Annual Ensemble Awards Concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, May 6, in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Auditions for the awards are open to the public and will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday, May 5.

The Chamber Music Society, through its awards program, strives to encourage young musicians to pursue chamber music as a career. Four awards are available this year. Two first awards of $2,000 each, one for strings with or without keyboard or woodwind is made possible by two anonymous donors and members of the Society.

The other for woodwinds and brass is made possible by the donations of members and major gifts from the City of Carmel and the Bing Crosby Youth Fund. The second award is the $1,500 Florence Allen Award, and the third is the $1,000 W. Frederick Schaad Award.

A two-tier judging procedure is used. Applicants must be under 26 years of age and submit a tape recording of their playing of two contrasting compositions. These recordings are used to select applicants who will compete before a blue ribbon panel of five judges. The winners, who will perform at the Sunday Ensemble Awards Concert, are announced at the end of the auditions.

This year eight ensembles have been selected to compete for the awards. The ensembles come from as far away as Massachusetts. Judges are George Barati, Joyce Johnson-Hamilton, William Corbett Jones, Richard Knab and William Whitson.

Single tickets are $4.50 at the door before the Sunday concert. Saturday auditions are open to the public free of charge. The Chamber Music Society welcomes donations in support of its Ensemble Awards Program for young musicians.

A workshop with Carmel master photographers

By ANNE PAPINEAU

EVEN BEFORE Edward Weston captured the contours of Point Lobos with his 8 x 10 view camera in the '20s the Monterey Peninsula has provided both subject and inspiration to photographers.

And if the list of famed photographers who make their home here reads like a roll call of camera greats, this fact has not gone unnoticed at Monterey Peninsula College. A series of photo workshops, which started last month and will continue until July, has featured camera craftsmen from around the country to the MPC lectern.

On May 13 and 14, however, the speakers will be not only skilled and famous, but will all be Monterey Peninsula residents.

Speakers at "Photographers on Photography," open to the public, include Al Weber, Morley Baer, Meredith Mullins, Dick Rowan and Jerry Takigawa. Also speaking will be Roger Fremier, workshop organizer, head of the MPC photography department and himself an established professional lensman.

Fremier calls the Monterey Peninsula "a photographic center outside the major markets such as New York."

"A lot of my work is done in Europe," said Fremier, a Carmel resident. "I come back here and find this is a nice place to sit and contemplate. The number of resident and traveling photographers found here is enriching."

Jerry Takigawa of Pacific Grove concurs that the pool of resident photographic talent he finds is helpful.

"When I moved here I didn't think about that community of photographers. It's really a very beautiful place," said Takigawa, who first pursued photography in the 1960s as an adjunct to painting.

"Being exposed to a lot of photographers with national and international reputations gives you a sense of community," he added. "This is a very friendly community and the exchange of ideas is very supportive to an artist."

Takigawa is the recipient of the national 1984 Cibachrome Grants Competition and operates a design studio in Pacific Grove. For the workshop, Takigawa said he will present both slides and prints of his photographs.

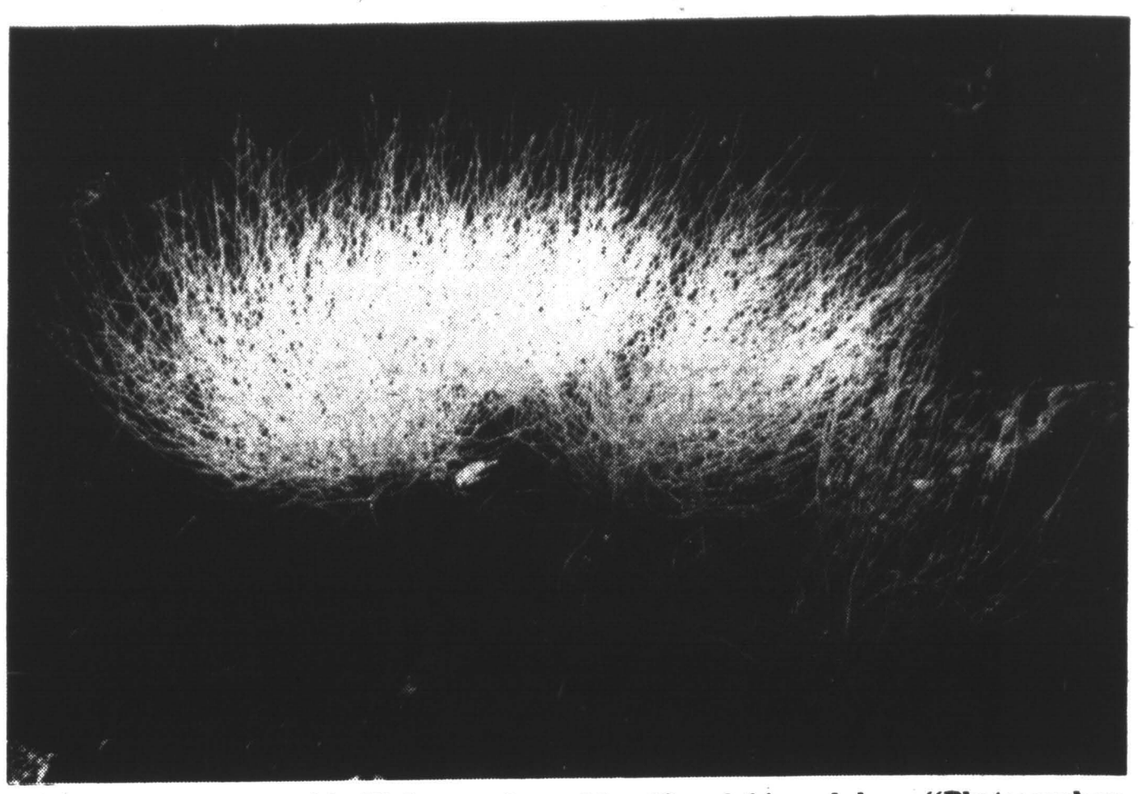
'IT'S GOOD FOR students to see real work and ask real photographers what they wanted to ask," he added.

Morley Baer moved here in 1946 to study under the masterful Edward Weston. He decided to stay.



CARMEL lensman Al Weber, who photographed this lacy weed, is among the professionals who will share insights at the May 13 and 14 workshop, "Photographers on Photography."

"I've worked elsewhere on the West Coast and in the Southwest. I like living here more than anyplace else," Baer said.

"The peninsula itself is a kind of breeding ground for photographers," Baer explained. "Every place you turn there is visual excitement. I can't put into words how it affects my work."

Baer recently completed a book for the Sierra Club, The Wilder Shore, to be published in the fall. In it Baer photographically chronicles the California coast. He described the project as "in the making for 30 years. It's one of those things you work on for your entire life. I doubt if I've got every grain of sand on the California coast, but I went where I like photographing."

Baer acknowledges the impact of the Monterey Peninsula on his art. "I like the place I live. I feel a great regard for it and appreciation for it."

With the passage of time, he said, he hopes his work has grown "more intense in its emotional content and more refined in its technical content."

He is a veteran of photographic workshops, and usually leads several each year for Friends of Photography and the University of California at Santa Cruz.

"It's very stimulating because I enjoy that prodding a lot of young photographers give you even though they don't know it," Baer said.

Edna Bullock entered the photographic field in the wake of her late husband, Wynn Bullock. After pursuing a career as a concert singer, Wynn Bullock operated portrait studios in Southern California. The Bullocks moved to the Monterey Peninsula in the '40s when Wynn headed the photographic concession and portrait studio at Fort Ord.

"We used to come to Pebble Beach when it was a 17 Mile Drive, and not short like it is now," Mrs. Bullock quipped. "I just love this area. I think my enthusiasm kind of influenced him as well as it influenced me."

A MONTEREY RESIDENT, Mrs. Bullock said she is presently working on two photographic series: male nudes and flea markets.

Of these projects, she wrote, "In the flea market series I try to select a feeling of order out of chaos within the framework of the negative. In the nude series, I want the nude to respond to the environment naturally."

A workshop veteran both behind and before the podium, Mrs. Bullock said she will bring examples of her own work and that of her husband to MPC.

As Carmel resident Al Weber puts it, "I've lived here since 1955 but my photography is of other places."

Two chief projects to which Weber devotes "almost all of my conscious time" are presentation of the work of local photographer Steve Crouch at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art on May 18 and preparation of a book on Geraldine Sharpe, who documented Africa before her death in 1969.

"I've traveled for 30 years, and I'm finding more and more things to look at here," Weber said of the Monterey Peninsula.

"I came here because this is a great place to live," Weber explained. "The fact that other photographers lived here was a bonus. The primary attractions have always been that this is an ideal place to raise a family."

Weber has already mapped out the content if not the form of his MPC presentation.

"I think if I have something to address, it would be my concern that a lot of young people coming up in photography don't want to do their homework. They want to step from kindergarten to greatness. I may just put that together in some kind of presentation, slides and lecture — not necessarily as the only way to do something, but a way I do it. It never bothered me it took a while to do something."

'The peninsula itself is a kind of breeding ground for photographers. Every place you turn there is visual excitement. I can't put into words how it affects my work.'

According to Dick Rowan, "Most of my photography these days is on speculation. I've avoided advertising, and advertising has avoided me."

DESPITE THAT pronouncement, an assignment for a cigarette company recently took Rowan away from the Monterey Peninsula he has long called home.

Like the other workshop leaders, Rowan represents a wealth and diversity of photographic experience.

"During the happy days of photojournalism, I worked for Life and Look and Holiday and Paris Match and other exciting publications. As TV took over, I faded into a role as a specialist in nature, travel and sports photography."

According to Roger Fremier, this workshop could prove useful to the "advanced amateur" shutterbug who would appreciate various points of view and personal contact with the pros.

"We'll go to lunch or coffee afterward, hopefully generate some friends," he said.

Fremier added that on Sunday an additional roster of quality photographers who are not as well known will also present portfolios and answer questions.

Class size is limited to 45. Tuition is $90 per person. For information or to register, call 646-4071 between 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. weekdays. Checks should be made payable to Monterey Peninsula College.

Crafts Guild will exhibit at Sunset

THE ANNUAL presentation by the Weavers and Spinners of the Carmel Crafts Guild will be exhibited May 9 to 31 in the Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center, Carmel.

Each year this creative and productive group designs a booth that depicts a local interpretation of the theme chosen for the Northern California Conference of Hand Weavers. The title for the 1984 show is "Ceremony," and local artists chose a colorful and patriotic response to celebrate the Fourth of July.

The Evans Gallery is on San Carlos at Eighth. It is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Admission is free.

Zantman Galleries present Duane Alt

FOLLOWING THE Impressionist tradition of small brush strokes and vibrant colors, Duane Alt captures portraits of flowers and Riviera scenes.

The artist will be present at a reception that honors his latest exhibit at the Zantman Art Galleries, 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, May 5, Sixth Avenue at Mission, Carmel. The event will also include a poster signing by Alt.

Though Duane Alt was born in the United States, his paintings have a decidedly "French" look. He has studied, lived and painted in France for extended periods.

The artist's background includes set design for the motion picture industry, art studies at the Sorbonne and the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, and more than 20 one-man shows in California, Texas, Florida and New York. Prominent collectors of his work include the late Princess Grace of Monaco and Acadamy Award-winning writer William Peter Blatty.

For more information about this and other exhibits at Zantman Art Galleries, call 624-8314. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Pearson jewelry displayed at Concepts

Jewelry by Ronald Hayes Pearson will be shown at Concepts, Sixth and Mission, Carmel, May 4-31.

A champagne reception for the artist will take place 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, May 4, at Concepts. For details, call 624-0661.

Watercolors shown at Fort Ord

Watercolors by Edwin Adamson will be displayed at the Fort Ord Arts and Crafts Gallery May 6-30.

The gallery is open 2 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday; 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday and holidays and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Visitors must obtain a pass at the Fort Ord main entrance to view the exhibit in the art center, Building 2250. For details, call 242-3584.

British comedy films continue

The Little Kidnappers, a 1953 comedy that stars Theodore Bikel, Adrienne Corri and Duncan Macrae will be shown at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 8, in the Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Admission to the British Comedy Film Festival is $2. For details, call 624-3996.

Russian jazz, Japanese drama screened

An international selection of noted films will be shown by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society.

Bread and Chocolate, an award-winning 1978 Italian movie, tells the story of Nino, an Italian working in Switzerland whose mishaps grow increasingly precarious. It will be shown Thursday, May 3.

Friday through Sunday, Red Hot Jazzman will be shown. This is a 1983 Russian production set in 1928 Moscow. Jazzman depicts a jazz quartet determined to win respect and overcome official censure.

Directed by Akira Kurosawa, Drunken Angel is a 1948 drama that features Toshiro Mifune in his first starring role. It will be screened Wednesday, May 9, only.

All films begin at 8:15 p.m. in Morse Auditorium at the Monterey Institute of International Studies, 440 Van Buren, Monterey. Admission is $3.50 general; $2.75 for students, seniors and military and $2 for members. For more information, call 659-4795.

Marine Culture Lab in Big Sur opens its doors

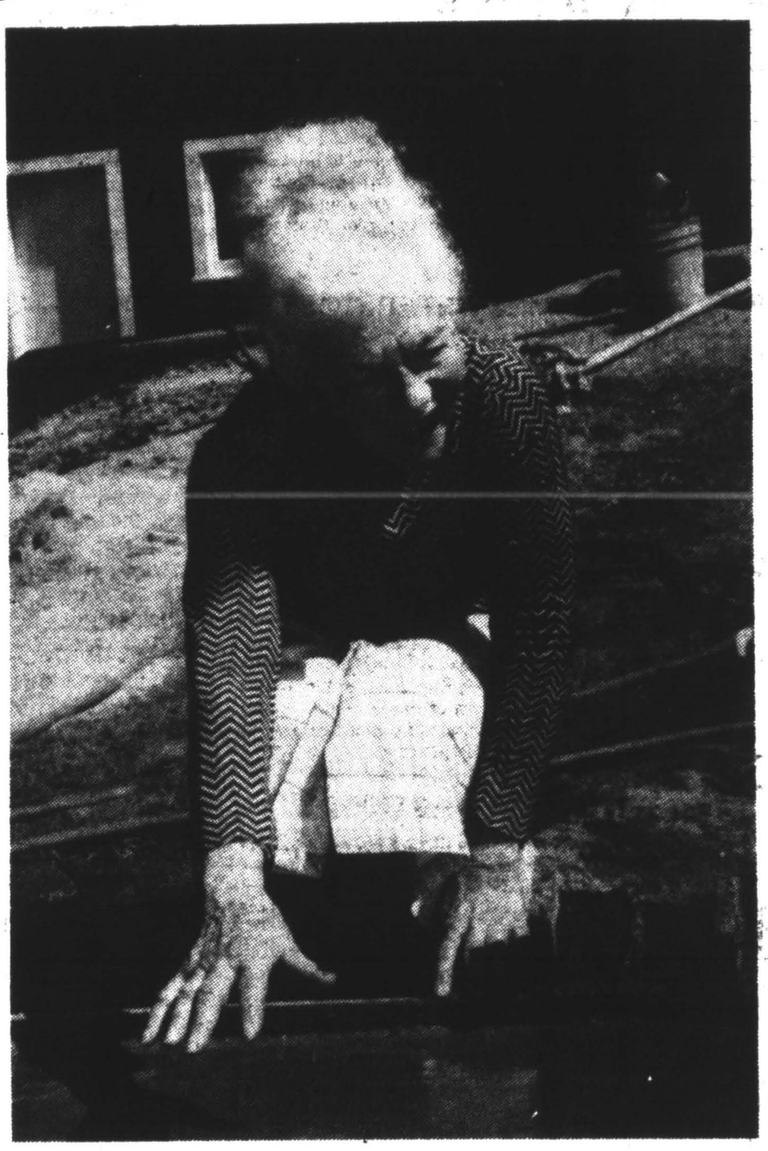
The California Department of Fish and Game will conduct its 13th annual open house 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, May 5, at its Marine Culture and Marine Pollution Studies Laboratories. These facilities are at Granite Canyon, nine miles south of Carmel on the ocean side of Highway 1.

The Marine Culture Laboratory (MCL) explores the feasibility for mass cultivation of selected shellfish species (mariculture). Shellfish species currently under investigation are the red and pink abalones and the Pismo and Washington clams. The abalone are cultivated on a pilot-production scale to test methods for fishery enhancement. The clam studies are still in the initial stages of identifying laboratory-culture methods for production of "seed" clams. The Washington clam studies have only recently begun.

In addition to displays of ongoing activities, there will be exhibits from other Department of Fish and Game central California marine projects. These will include fish, shellfish and sea otter displays, as well as a touch tank. Also, there will be project exhibits by Moss Landing Marine Laboratories graduate students who conduct research at the MCL through a cooperative program.

Personnel will be available to discuss marine biology topics and to explain programs.

Fun and games at Bay School



DEDICATION OF "Rosa's Yard" in honor of Rosa Doner, first director of the Bay School parent cooperative nursery, will highlight the annual Bay Day celebration from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, May 5 at the little red school house on Highway 1 about one mile south of Rio Road. The yard includes the new speedway. The annual Bay Day celebration will feature "Grand Prix" races on the new track, plus the usual assortment of games such as the fishing pond, bean bag toss and pocket lady. Refreshments also will be in the race theme with hot dogs, Polish dogs and sodas. There will not be a full-course barbecue as there has been in the past. The popular silent auction and raffle will continue, as well as the many baked goods booths. The event annually raises about $3,000 for the school, a parent co-op for children ages three to five. Above Mrs. Doner and current director Wendy Banks preview the track. At right, Mrs. Doner got ready to imprint her hand on the speedway cement. (Photos by Michael Gardner.)

Mary Brinton named new president of the Padre Parents

By MARY POTT

The new executive board of the Carmel High Padre Parents Club has been elected. The 1984-85 officers include Mary Brinton, president; Wendy Banks, vice president; Glenda Selle, treasurer; Marcy Murray, secretary and Susi Wagstaff, volunteer coordinator.

Carmel High Vice Principal Joe Feldeison thanked the Padre Parents for their support of the recent CLOSE-UP trip which 16 students made to Washington, D.C. "It was a tremendous program, reaching the whole broad spectrum of politics," he said. He hopes that next year the number of students could be increased to 25.

Junior class president Greg Guzaitis gave a report on his class activities and the work being done on the Junior - Senior Prom at the Monterey Conference Center April 28.

Dick Radowicz, SCRAMP coordinator reported that the Laguna Seca race track has grown to world class level in road racing and the Padre Parents has an opportunity to grow with it in profits by continuing work in the BingMobile as concessionaires. All parents were urged to volunteer their services for at least one day at one of the five races this year.

The first phase of the Peer Excellence Program was explained by Principal Marsha Kading Kelly. On May 9 a forum meeting will be conducted where parents will be able to speak out on what they want and expect from Carmel High School.

It was recommended that the FOCUS donation be used for sound equipment for the new cafeteria. In other business, the board approved $3,500 to be used by the district as a part of the total expense of the new computer program which will be established.

Immediately after graduation, a reception will be given in the gym by the We Care group. Richard and Mary Brinton and Mike and Dorine Kunkle will lead the Casino Night. Anne Roberts will be in charge of games and parents were encouraged to donate auction items and refreshments.

The final meeting of the year will be a luncheon to honor the old and new boards. It will be noon, May 11 at the Thunderbird Bookstore.

Why Ansel Adams' print prices will rise slowly

He stopped printing new images years ago

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE TOURIST couple inside the Weston Gallery in Carmel turned to admire Ansel Adams' image Gathering Winter Storm as their young child quietly sat in the nearby stroller and nursed on a bottle.

They asked sales representative Maria Lindley how much the photograph would cost and she responded: "$10,500. No, I'm sorry, $11,000." The man laughed and said "What's another $500?" Ms. Lindley kiddingly replied: "The price is going up before your very eyes."

Since his death on Easter Sunday, April 22, the photographs, posters and books by Ansel Adams have become coveted among serious collectors and hobbyists alike.

Art galleries and bookstores report such a rush on his signed books and posters that they now are hard to find. The unsigned books and posters are selling briskly, but are not in as much demand as those that bear his signature.

'I certainly wouldn't charge double for a book that Ansel signed for me for free.'

There also is a renewed activity among private collectors, according to local art dealers. But the activity varies. Some collectors have withdrawn their photographs from the market while others hope that the increased interest in Adams' work will lead to a quick sale.

(For those who would like to see a collection of Adams' work, the Friends of Photography has opened an exhibit for public view from 1 to 5 p.m. daily at Sunset Center. The photographs were selected by Adams' wife of 56 years, Virginia.)

Although they do expect the prices of Adams' work to increase — especially his vintage and large-size images — local art galleries do not expect an across-the-board doubling or tripling of the cost of his photographs.

There are several reasons why prices for the photographs will not skyrocket, Weston Gallery representative Russ Anderson told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

The key to the market for Adams' images lies in the fact that he stopped taking orders for new prints effective Dec. 31, 1975. Adams filled those orders over the next several years but then stopped making prints, Anderson explained.

Up until his death Adams preferred to work on his books. Adams had just released Examples in December and his autobiography was near completion when he died. Assistants are expected to complete work on that book.

BECAUSE ADAMS no longer made prints, "essentially the supply of the prints on the market is a finite supply," Anderson said.

"The supply of prints, by itself, will not be affected in any way, shape or form. Now the demand may," he continued. "For all intents and purposes Ansel Adams died on the market Jan. 1, 1976."

The market for Adams's work has fluctuated over the years. Demand increased from 1976 to 1979 and then the recession led to a slowing of the market before sales began to pick up again in 1983, Anderson said.

"People suddenly began to realize that there was a finite supply of special prints," he said.

Anderson does not advise print collectors to resort to "panic buying" because Adams has died.

"Effective markets develop slowly over a long period of time. The prints that are on the market were on the market for a long time," he said. "Not in any sense is there a need or cause for panic buying."

Anderson added that there has been a large number of inquiries about Adams' work and its availability.

"I do know there's a lot of people scraping for prints right now, but they're not scraping here."

Anderson denounced those collectors and galleries that may attempt to cash in on Adams' death by raising prices of his photographs, and signed posters and books.

"We have not raised our prices and we do not expect to raise our prices," said Anderson, whose gallery sells prints from $1,800 to $45,000.

"During Ansel's lifetime anybody could take books and posters down and Ansel would sign them," he said. "I certainly wouldn't charge double for a book that Ansel signed for me for free."

David Stroud, gallery assistant at Photography West in Carmel, agrees with Anderson. Photography West did not raise the prices of its signed books or posters. The gallery supply now is depleted.

"We've been very, very busy," said Stroud, who added that the prints at the gallery range from $1,500 to $15,000.

Stroud said part of the rush can be attributed to "a lot of people who may have been considering getting something who now know that sooner is better than later."

Stroud predicts that prices will rise between 10 and 30 percent, but most of the popular Adams prints will be available.

"The prints everybody likes are those he made many copies of," Stroud said.

Bookstores also report a rush on signed editions and posters.

Don Saxby, manager of Books Inc. in Carmel Plaza, said the store has kept regular prices on all Adams' materials, but the signed posters and books are sold out. The book Yosemite, Range of Light, at $125, was perhaps the most popular edition.

Saxby called it "pathetic" that most of the people buying the work merely are interested in the art as an investment. "It's ghoulish," he said.

Mae Waldroup, owner of The Thunderbird in The Barnyard, said she has kept prices "just the way they were."

Most of the purchases at The Thunderbird have been of Adams' signed books.

Bookworks in Pacific Grove doubled the price of the signed books and raised the cost of the $25 signed posters to $100. Still, the books and posters were grabbed off the shelves.

"They're gone, we have none left for sale," said a store employee. "Others are available, but they're not signed."

Blowing Snow, Yosemite National Park, California, c. 1955 is the title of this Ansel Adams image now on exhibit at Friends of Photography, Sunset Center, Carmel. The exhibit has been curated by the late Adams' wife, Virginia.

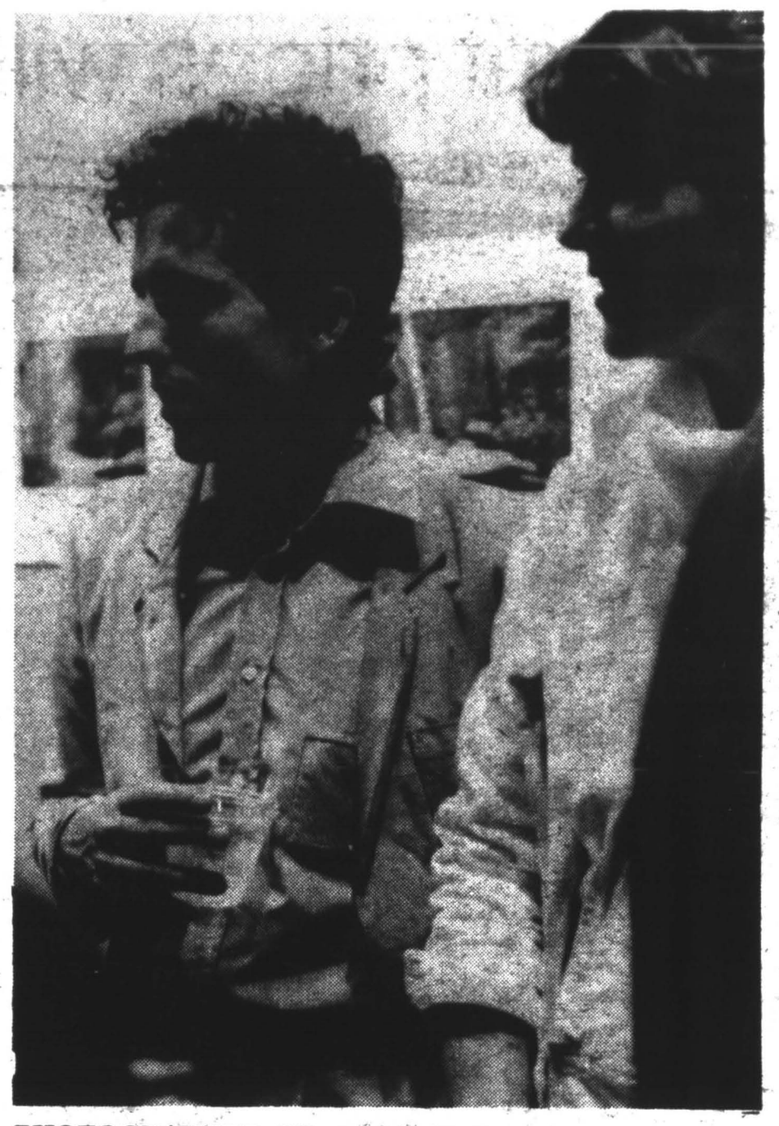
VIRGINIA ADAMS was curator of a Friends of Photography memorial exhibit for her late husband, photographer and conservationist Ansel Adams. The show opened with a special reception Friday, April 27. Adams, recognized as the world's leading landscape photographer, passed away Easter Sunday, April 22. The exhibit is open free to the public from 1 to 5 p.m. daily at the Friends gallery in Sunset Center. (Photos by Michael Gardner.)



PHOTOGRAPHER Winston Swift Boyer was one of the many friends and fellow professionals who attended a reception to open the memorial exhibit for the late Ansel Adams.

Play Ball! Carmel Youth Baseball opens

49er Gervais is big hit; campaign in full swing

By DOROTHY MEHEEN

Opening day for Carmel Youth Baseball at Larson Field always features the excitement and anticipation of a major league baseball game. Much to the delight of both players and spectators, the ceremony and games Saturday, April 28, were blessed with sunny weather, as opposed to the heavy torrent of rains last year.

While the Pinto and Mustang divisions entertained crowds with a round-robin jamboree, the Bronco Division played three complete games on the other field.

Carmel Valley Disposal came from behind in a knuckle-clenching seventh inning to beat Nielsen Bros. Market 6-5, behind the bat of Bravlio DeAnda, whose spectacular double into left field with bases loaded brought in the winning run. Ben Jones, who made his pitching debut on the Bronco field, was pitcher of record. Ben not only pitched well, but fielded with all the skill and confidence of a seasoned player.

Carlos Moore was lead hitter for Carmel Valley Disposal, while CVD's center fielder, Chris Biason, made some great catches, including a running dive for a high fly off the bat of Scott Gill. Leading hitter for Nielsen Bros. Market was Scott Smith, who doubled and went 3-3.

Directly following, Pine Inn took the lead in the fifth inning to beat Sierra Motor Coach 10-7. Russell Peavey pitched the win and went 3-4. Robbie Takigawa helped out with a double and went 2-4.

Sierra Motor Sports lead hitters were Brody Womer, who doubled and went 2-4; Alex Ramos, who also doubled; and George Zarate, who went 2-3.

The last game of the day ended with a big victory for La

Three candidates for music director

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

WITH THE announcement this week of three candidates for music director of the Monterey County Symphony, we now face what promises to be a spectacular season, and the full flush of local scrutiny, emotion and opinion.

Thomas Conlin was the first official candidate to replace the retiring Haymo Taeuber. Now add George Zack of the Lexington Philharmonic, Kirk Trevor with two seasons as assistant and associate conductor for the Dallas Symphony, and Philip Greenberg, lately of the Phoenix Symphony and former assistant to Antal Dorati in Detroit.

To fuel the excitement, there appears little consistency among the resumes of these men. Zack has no major orchestra conducting credits, and his recent guest appearances in Louisville and Charleston were, like his Monterey engagement, candidate auditions.

By the same token, Zack spent his 12 seasons in Lexington building the orchestra and increasing the number and kind of concert activities there. Zack's career must be seen as community-oriented rather than expansive.

The career of Kirk Trevor is the exact opposite. Here is a list of international successes that makes even greater impact when the difficulties which attend those accomplishments are known. Getting into London's Guildhall School of Music, into important positions in both its orchestral and opera programs, and into private cello studies with Paul Tortelier are all to be considered rare.

No less so is the Fulbright Exchange Grant which brought him to the North Carolina School of the Arts. He became associate conductor for the Charlotte Symphony and music director of its Youth Symphony of the Carolinas, then went to Dallas where his stature took yet another step up after only one year. Trevor's modus operandi is filled with careful planning and upward mobility. He would probably be brilliant in Monterey and quickly on his way to bigger things.

Philip Greenberg is highly regarded, both as violinist and conductor. His career began while he was still a child and he has enjoyed successes on both sides of the Atlantic, especially for his two prizes in the prestigious Nicolai Malko conducting competition in 1977. Adjudicating chairman at that contest, interestingly enough, was Herbert Blomstedt, music director designate for the San Francisco Symphony, who is also known to be looking for an assistant.

Of all his successes and excellent press, Greenberg did leave his post as resident conductor "to study scores and move on to his next musical challenge," as the press release says, and where he is going, and what the MCS is looking for are among the questions to be answered.

The Monterey County Symphony promises to announce another candidate before the end of the summer, leaving the sixth subscription program undesignated, but probably intended for Maestro Taeuber.

In addition to the four announced candidates, and the one as yet unidentified, Carter Nice — the Sacramento Symphony director who opened our current season — has let it be known that he would like to be considered too.

THE CHAMBER Music Societ has the unique distinction of focusing both its collective attention and its collective attitude on its guest artists. Since the very first visit, the Tokyo Quartet has enjoyed genuine friendliness and welcome. As a result, the Tokyo has gladly returned and returned to play for substantially below normal fees.

The appearance Saturday night by the Endellion Quartet had all the signals for a repeat of history, and for a new love affair. This young ensemble, founded in 1979 and including a second violinist added no sooner than last Christmas, found the ideal combination of richness, detail, focus and flair to distinguish the jovial Haydn, the thoughtful and intense Britten, and the lyrical Borodin works they played.

In addition the players, who typically took their cues from first violinist Andrew Watkinson, strode confidently forth when their solos came up. The four showed clearly that they had their collective ideas well considered, but were both self-possessed and relaxed enough to sing out individually.

Watkinson enjoys a strong counterpart in violist Garfield Jackson, who showed both the strength and flawless accuracy of the former. Cellist David Waterman was their equal in every respect except focus of personal style, and second violinist James Clark revealed the only tension of the evening, and then only once, in the Borodin.

The Haydn Quartet in C, Op. 75, No. 1 was spirited and hearty, except in its broadly gracious slow movement, and gentle third movement trio. The finale, Chacony, of the Britten Quartet No. 2 in C, a tribute to Henry Purcell and, at times, a troubled, Shostakovich-like statement, proved so rich with effects and drama that tracing its deep expression proved as disturbing as it was fascinating. The mutes of the second movement together with the sizzling virtuosity of the melody carriers were especially effective, and C major somehow took on a whole new meaning.

The lovely Borodin Quartet in D enjoyed an ideal reading, with the animated parts of the gorgeous Nocturne compellingly and vivaciously asserted. The baubles and beads of the Scherzo came closer to Mendelssohn's fairy music than I have ever heard.

The generous encore was the deliciously weird Italian Serenade of Hugo Wolf.

Theater review

'Rainmaker' lively, entertaining fun

By JOANNE TENENBAUM

A MIDDLE-AGED rancher, his businesslike older son and rowdy younger one, and his almost-spinster daughter turn out to be the right stuff for the rainmaker, a sweet-talking, razzle-dazzle con man bent on working a miracle among them, in the Monterey Peninsula College production of The Rainmaker, directed by Joan Dougherty Swartz.

N. Richard Nash's three act comedy-drama explores the problems of self-fulfilling prophecy and the importance of perspective through the vehicle of the Curry family, who structure time for the most part by dealing with the problem of getting Lizzie, the no-longer-young only daughter, married off. But like most problems, there's more to it than that.

H.C. Curry has a clear eye and a loving heart, but he does not know how to manage his three grown children. Noah, the oldest, is the embodiment of self-righteous common sense. When he isn't busy running his father's ranch, he's running his brother Jimmy's life, and when he can't do that, he bosses his father around.

Jimmy suffers in the mirror of stupidity Noah constantly holds up to him, and even H.C. is ineffectual in the face of Noah's blistering pessimism. Lizzie, a woman convinced of her own undesirability, is not helped by Noah's insistence that she views herself as a spinster, but like most people, Lizzie is her own worst enemy. For Lizzie's personality reflects her central conviction: "I can't try to be beautiful when I know I'm plain."

Nonetheless, the Currys are loathe to give up. H.C. tries mightily to bring Lizzie together with File, the sheriff's deputy he knows would love her if only he would allow himself to.

Ron Rountree's characterization of H.C. is consistently appealing. He conveys a father's genuine sensitivity for his daughter's happiness and great tolerance for all his children. Still, H.C. does not succeed. File's defenses and his daughter's convictions are too strong for him.

In the midde of a drought, nothing is more needed than a thunderstorm. Lizzie dreams of one early in the play. It enters late in Act One in the shape of Bill Starbuck, the rainmaker. With him come showmanship, excitement, highflown talk and a great deal of posturing. Not to mention the promise of rain within 24 hours for $100. In short, the Currys (most of them, anyway) are hooked.

It's not so much a question of whether or not Starbuck can make rain, as it is what form the storm will take, for the con man among them constitutes a catalyst to work out the Currys' problems. How they do this is the business of the remainder of the play, and a great deal more enjoyable to see for yourself.

The Rainmaker is a lively, entertaining play with a lot of action, including fisticuffs, love scenes, and family squabbles. To see it at MPC's tiny SRO Theater is also to see yet another triumph of creativity over inconvenience, for the MPC Theater Department makes consistent good use of the very confining stage space.

ALAN WILLIAMS' compact three-purpose setting blends harmoniously a sheriff's office, the Currys' living area, and a tack room. Selective lighting by Michael Kaplan defines the changing scenes. A lot of setting is packed into the tiny space, yet the characters move well within it, and it is a comfortable setting for the play.

The Rainmaker is a show that begs to be stolen by the title role, and silver-haired, dashingly dressed Alberto almost succeeds. Rakish enough to be false, energetic enough to believe in himself, his portrayal of the con man brings great energy to the production. It is sometimes overplayed but it works.

As Lizzie, LaVonne Rae Andrews artfully combines the potential of prettiness and the primness of Lizzie's self-confirmed plainness. Andrews has this part well in hand and manages its many aspects with ease.

Bobby Lee Armstrong's Noah is choleric; his speeches are delivered rapid-fire and at fever pitch. This sometimes present problems in the pacing of the scenes that attentive direction could smooth out.

Mark Burgman's Jimmy successfully conveys the sibling rivalry and undying frustration of life as a little brother who tries to step out of his big brother's shadow and into a life of his own. He broadly caricatures the country bumpkin, more so than perhaps the part requires, but Burgman and Armstrong together succeed in their portrayal of brotherly conflict and love.

"To make it rain," the rainmaker says, "it takes a lot of confidence. If you have doubt about me, I have doubts about myself." Want the exact recipe? This artful entertainment on the power of positive thinking runs one more week at MPC. I recommend you see it.

'Creation' tickets are available

Tickets must be purchased by mail in advance for the performance of Haydn's Creation, to be given May 11 by the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society in conjunction with the Masters Society of Santa Cruz.

Singers from all counties in the Bay Area will participate in this special joint presentation. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Carmel Mission Basilica.

Tickets are $8 and can be purchased by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Choral Society, Box 272, Carmel, 93921.

Playa over Derek Rayne 10-4. Kevin Winton was winning pitcher and also doubled for La Playa. Hitting well for Derek Rayne were Danny Klienbardt, who tripled, and Chris Karachale, with a double.

In the Minor Softball League, MPTV lost 12-1 to the Carmel Vikings on April 23. Missy Cardoza pitched the win, doubled, and went 2-2 for the Vikings, while Andra Greco helped out at bat with a double. Second baseman Cassie Brophy caught a great fly ball and Molly O'Leary played well at first.

In Major League Softball, the WWD Indians lost to NPGS on April 23, with a bad first inning due to "jitters," and let in 12 runs. Suzanne Suwada, however, did make a home run and was one of the leading hitters, along with Lisa Bernardi for WWD. Janine Pullen threw out two runners who attempted to steal third.

On Thursday, Post 41 beat Fouratt 16-4, and the game was called due to darkness. Putting up a good fight for Fouratt were Elvinia Scott, who went 2-2, and Hallie Levy, who made a double play.

WWD had a big win in an excellently played game the following day over P.G. Green, 23-3. Pitching the win was Tina Mouten; Kari Bernardi wowed everyone with a triple and a double and went 3-3. Lisa Miller helped out with a double. In the top of the second inning, with two P.G. runners on base, WWD's second baseman, Daniel Hayman, caught a line drive, stepped on second base, and tagged out another runner for an unassisted triple play.

The day before, WWD had another win, this time over Marina, 9-6. Suzanne Suwada was winning pitcher, and struck out 11 of 12 batters in a darkness-shortened fourth-inning game. Leading hitters for WWD were Lisa Bernardi and Caroline Borge.

Youth perspective

Grading system rates an 'F'

By LU SPIRIT

THE ISSUE today is grading at Carmel Middle School. I am not complaining so much about what I got, just what happens to it.

I recently got involved in an argument at school in which I agreed with my teacher against the computer grading system.

First of all, when he got back the data sheet with the conducts written beside the original grade, he was steamed.

I did not blame him because almost every conduct grade was either distorted or completely different from what the teacher put, hence I received bad comments in place of what the teacher originally put — good comments. So for this, the teacher took hours from school time to rewrite them all.

Also, the honor roll has some ironic measures involved in its frustrating number list. For example, a 3.5 average gets you on it. Here is the grading:

A = 4.0
A- = 3.8
B+ = 3.2
B = 3.0
B- = 2.8
C+ = 2.2
C = 2.0

Does this look right to you? It shouldn't, for what comes between 3.8 and 3.2? Surprise! Nothing! Yet a 3.5 gets you on the honor roll. Strange, huh? For this reason many spaces on the roll in which students could have been proud averagers were left blank.

Well, I was one of those students, and I, like others, was not too happy. I told my math teacher: "Off by two points!" and he replied: "No, Luther, two-tenths of a point." How depressing. And here I write about it...

Well, all I have to say is that this may be the computer age, but I don't think my age is quite ready for this age.

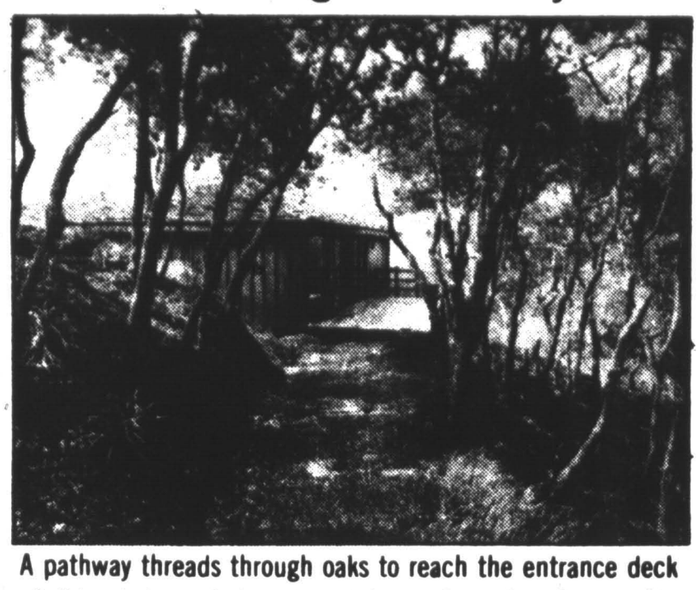
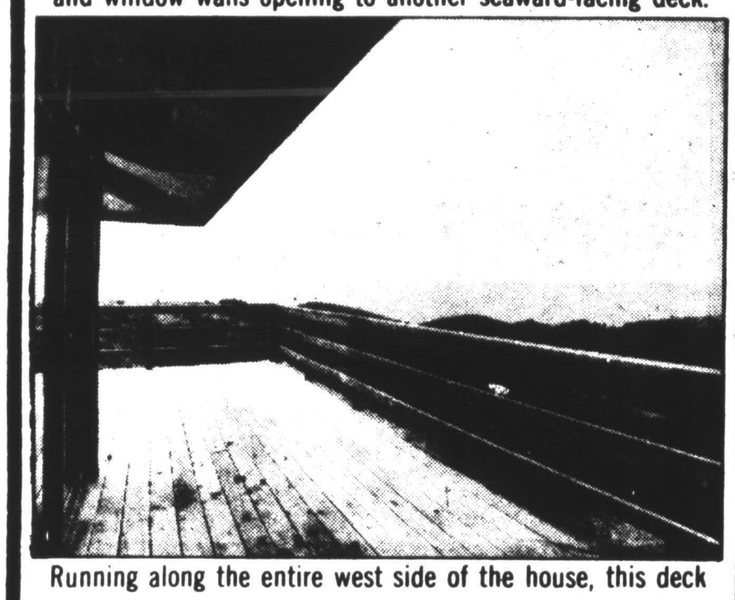
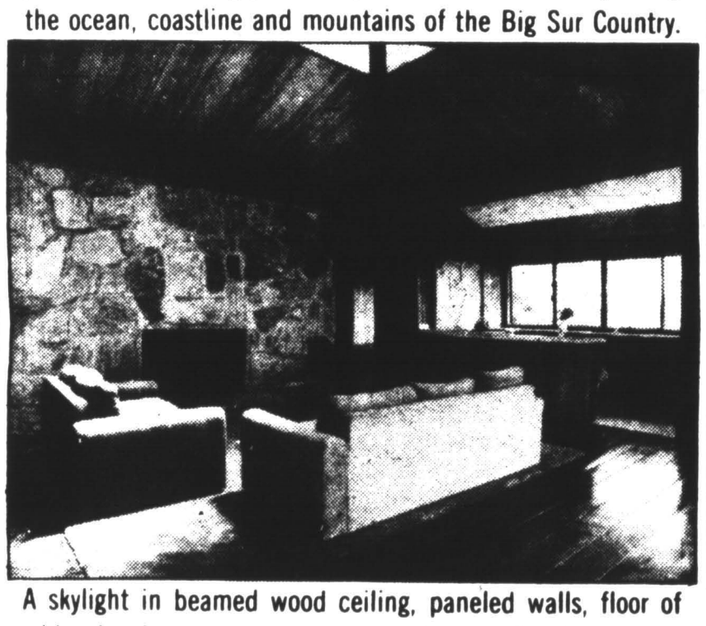
Atop Pfeiffer Ridge In The Big Sur Country



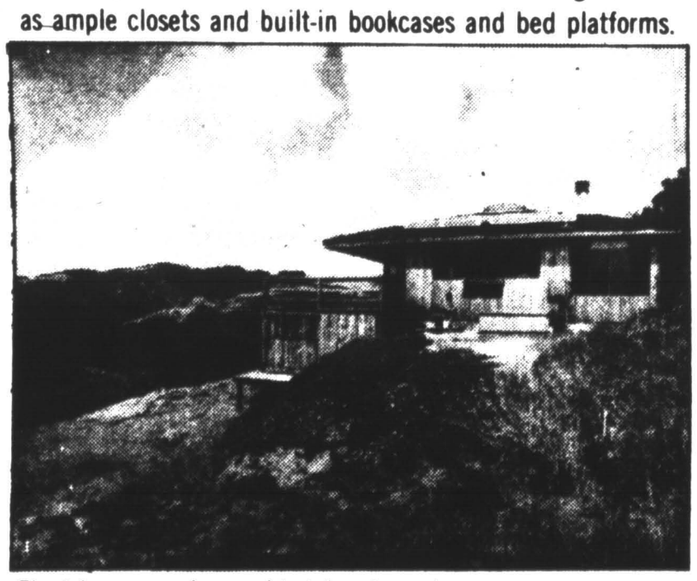
A pathway threads through oaks to reach the entrance deck of this shake-roofed, redwood home featuring fine craftsmanship, interior use of stone combined with native woods and window walls opening to another seaward-facing deck.



Running along the entire west side of the house, this deck provides outdoor enjoyment of panoramic view encompassing the ocean, coastline and mountains of the Big Sur Country.



A skylight in beamed wood ceiling, paneled walls, floor of wide pine boards, window walls and stone fireplace are in the living room which extends into a compact kitchen with handcrafted cabinets topped by stone counters. Stone also backs the stove using propane gas. Off this central area, and with both floor and countertop of stone, the bathroom features a sunken tub in a windowed alcove permitting view of hills and ocean. The two carpeted bedrooms also are off the living room and have similar walls and ceiling as well as ample closets and built-in bookcases and bed platforms.



Electric power is provided by the solar panels located on the roof, also by a propane generator. Water comes from a mutual system and privacy is assured by a five-acre site reached by a weather-stabilized road inside a locked gate close to Highway One approximately 25 miles south of Carmel. Price of this restful haven amid hills sloping to the sea over which the sun sets in glowing glory is $260,000.

INEXPENSIVE CARMEL HOMES OPEN SUNDAY 1-4 P.M.

$180,000. Everyone who sees it comments on the charming house and garden ambience. Open cathedral ceiling with wood beams and walls in the living room. Built-in china cabinets. Two bedrooms and one modern bath. Sunny kitchen with breakfast area. Single car garage. Quiet street and just a 100 yards north of Father Serra's statue at the entrance to town. Castro just north of Dolores.

$219,000. If Carmel Point is YOUR area and you'd like a large and sunny lot within a short walk of the beach, you'd have to pay big bucks these days. This 3 bedroom and 2 bath home is just on the edge of the point on a 60x100 foot lot. It is intermediate in size and condition and thus comes at a price that reflects those conditions. Live near the point and the beach but keep your big bucks. You can buy this home for middle-size bucks. 16th and CAMINO REAL.

$227,500. Not quite in Carmel but rather in one of the very best parts of Monterey where you get more houses for the same bucks than you do in Carmel. 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, den, double garage, dining room. Located in Skyline Forest for that mountainous feeling at modest prices. 26 Wyndemere Way.

RUGGIERO RICCI will perform in concert with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra on three consecutive evenings, May 6-8. For ticket information, call 624-8511 or 758-3594.

Symphony will present violin virtuoso Ricci

VIOLIN VIRTUOSO Ruggiero Ricci, described as a "kind of reincarnation of Paganini," will perform in concert with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra this week.

Ricci will appear under the baton of Maestro Haymo Taeuber for three concerts, Sunday through Tuesday, May 6-8. This, the last concert of the season for the Monterey County Symphony, will include Max Bruch's Concerto No. 1 in G Minor. Also on the program is Richard Wagner's Prelude to The Mastersingers of Nuremburg and the Ravel orchestration of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition.

Ricci has played before more people in more places and recorded more music for violin than any other living soloist, with more than 5,000 concerts in 64 countries and more than 500 records to his credit.

Ricci characterizes his playing as cantilena or "clear and singing," a mark of the Italian School. He was the first to record all 24 of the Paganini Caprices in their original version and for many this remains the definitive recording. Ricci was also the first to record the complete music for violin of Dvorak, Saint-Saens, and Lalo.

Works for unaccompanied violin, especially Bach, and works of the virtuosi-composers, such as Kreisler, are also Ricci's trademark, but his eclectic interests have led him into almost every corner of the string repertoire, including jazz and South American folk music.

His programs are often "breakaways" in the sense that Ricci does not follow the old formats. His was the first New York performance of Prokofiev's D Major Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin.

In 1964 in a series of four concerts in New York, he played 15 of the great concerti in string literature, tracing its highlights from the Baroque to the avant-garde. In 1977 he partnered Ernesto Bitetti in a unique program of duos for violin and guitar.

Sponsored by a local business, The Cambridge Plan, the concerts will be presented Sunday in King Hall of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey; Monday in the Sunset Theater, Carmel and Tuesday in Sherwood Hall in Salinas. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

The Monday evening concert in Sunset Theater will be presented in honor of patroness of the arts Louise M. Davies, who birthday falls in May.

Attending the concert with Mrs. Davies will be members of her family and special friends, including Donald Crawford, Philip Hudner and Virginia Stanton.

Tickets for all concerts are available at the Symphony office, 624-8511 or 758-3594. Ticket outlets for the Monterey concert are Lily Walker's in Pacific Grove and Abinante Music in Monterey. For the Salinas concert, ticket outlets are Gadsby's Music Company and the Salinas Community Center Ticket Office.

Unreserved balcony seats, at a cost of $3, are available for Sherwood Hall on concert night. Box office opens at 7 p.m.

Laguna Seca action opens between Salinas and Monterey off Highway 68. Action will start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday's feature will be the Nor-Am Pro Fords, scheduled to begin at 4:15 p.m. in a 25-lap, 47.5-mile dash.

Sunday's action will open at 10:15 a.m. with the Jim Russell Pro Series, a 30-miler. The Camel GTO/GTU will follow at 11 a.m. and that will be a 75-mile run. The Champion Spark Plug Challenge, also a 75-miler, will get under way at 1 p.m.

The Red Lobster Camel GT 100 will get a green flag at 2:15 p.m. and the main event will be 52 laps on this nine-turn layout. Rounding out the main event slate for May 6 will be the 30-mile Renault Alliance Cup at 3:30 p.m.

Tickets are on sale at all BASS Ticket Centers (including Record Factory in Monterey), Ticketron outlets or fans can charge by phone, 373-1811. The Laguna Seca Office, 2030 Fremont Blvd., Monterey, is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Visa and MasterCard are accepted at the office.

Ticket prices for the 21st Nissan Monterey Triple Crown weekend remain the same as for 1983. The two-day VIP ticket, good for admission, paddock and seating in the grandstand area, is $25. The two-day general admission ticket is $14 and the Sunday general admission ticket is $10. Tickets will be slightly higher at the gate. There are no Saturday-only tickets for sale.

Camping in the Laguna Seca Recreation Area and in the infield between turns two and three of the circuit is available on a first-come, first-served basis at $9 per night. Camp stickers for Friday and Saturday nights can be ordered with tickets through the Laguna Seca office, and can also be charged.

'Color' is topic of Women's Network luncheon

Lin Rosario, owner of a beauty salon, will be the guest speaker at a brown bag luncheon meeting of the Professional Women's Network of the Monterey Peninsula at noon May 8 at the Crossroads Community Room.

Her topic will be "The Impact of Color."

Ms. Rosario opened her shop, Harmonies, four years ago.

The brown bag luncheon is free to Network members and admission for non-members is $3.
